BUY OR NOT TO BUY.

Norway Voters Must Decide.

The action of the School Board in asking the town to condemn certain building lots near the Academy, on the ground that these lots are necessary in view of the increased number of pupils who will attend this school in the future, is creating some little comment from those opposed to such action.

The opinion seems to be with those so opposed that the town already has sufficient grounds for any enlargement of the present building that can possibly be necessary for years to come, and that the town with its already heavy taxes cannot possibly appropriate money for the extension of the present building for at least eight or ten years. In the meantime should this land not be condemned, it will be improved, adding taxable property to the town and furnish residences that are actually necessary at this time.

C. G. Blake says that it was his intention to improve all of this corner should conditions warrant it, and that within two or three years several residences would be erected, but if this land is condemned, it means none.

They also say if more room is needed for athletics, why not purchase the lot on the corner of Alpine and Paris streets, or the Whitcomb lot across the river. Either of these lots would be larger and more adapted to such purposes. One party says he would be one of several to buy either of these lots and present it to the town for such purposes rather than see the lots in question unimproved with residences so much needed.

Annual Roll Call.

The annual roll call of Lake Temple, Pythian Sisters, was held Friday evening at Pythian Hall. At 6:45 an excellent supper was served which consisted of baked beans, salads, cold meats, pickles, hot rolls, doughnuts, assorted cake, pies, coffee and tea. The supper was in charge of Mrs. Percy H. Nevers, Chairman; Mrs. Edith Edwards, Mrs. Alice Nash; Mrs. Beatrice Smith, Mrs. Mary Lewis, Mrs. Susan Wentzel, Mrs. Gertrude Libby, Mrs. Alice Walker and Mrs. Addie Pledge. The tables were decorated with cherry blossoms.

After the supper the roll was called and forty-seven responded. Following the roll call a program was given as follows:

Piano solo ..... Gladys Edwards
Selection, "Bon Ton," the comic quartet .....
Mrs. Emma Buck, Mrs. Gertrude Libby, Arthur Lewis and Albion L. Buck: pianist, Leon Kimball.
Vocal solo ..... Berenice Nash

The last number on the program was a pantomime entitled "Looking Backward," and the cast included Mrs. Percy H. Nevers, Mrs. Gertrude Libby, Mrs. Beatrice Smith, Mrs. Alice Nash, Mrs. Emma Buck, Berenice Nash, Mrs. Mary Lewis, Mrs. Mary Kimball and Mrs. Maude Spiller.

The past winter has been a prosperous one for Lake Temple, and a large number of members have joined the past season.

The swans in the river at Norway village attract much attention. They are owned by F. H. Cummings and are surely large, graceful, snowy white beauties.

Norway Post Office.

Larger postal savings deposits will now be accepted at the post office. This is made possible by an important amendment to the Postal Savings Act just approved by President Wilson. A postal savings depositor may now have an account amounting to $1,000 upon which interest will be paid. Formerly $500 was the maximum amount he could have to his credit. This enlargement of postal savings facilities will be very gratifying to thousands of depositors who have already reached the old $500 limit and are anxious to entrust more of their savings to Uncle Sam.

Another feature of the amendment that will avoid further embarrassment to the public and to postal officials is the doing away with the limit on the amount that could be accepted from a depositor monthly. Under the old law only $100 could be deposited in a calendar month. The amendment abolishes this restriction.

The crab apple tree in front of John Sampson's has been in full bloom this week and a thing of beauty.

Mrs. F. H. Richardson has had a trouble with her arm for a few weeks. It is much better.

Repairs have been made on the Hobbs' Pond dam, which gave away last week.

Saturday, May 20, the Norway high school base ball team, in a splendid game, defeated Lisbon Falls high school by a score of 6 to 2. The total number of errors for both teams was three. The game was won in the fifth inning when the visiting pitcher showed a wild streak, and Norway gained five runs. The feature was the Norway battery, Bethell and Brooks, who showed very good form throughout the game. H. Prosser of Lisbon should also be mentioned, as the chief hitter.

Saturday, May 27, Norway high will play Rumford high at the Fair Grounds. The following Tuesday, they will play the return game with Lisbon Falls high at Lisbon.

At intermission ice cream and cake were served by the Veranda Club.

The floor manager was Arthur Welch and the aids were Osman Hill, Herman Richardson and Maford Mann.

The party broke up at a late hour after a very pleasant evening.

An unusually life-like picture of the late Hon. A. S. Kimball has been placed at the Norway Savings Bank, of which he had served as President for many years, and one in the I. O. O. F. Hall, by Norway Lodge, I. O. O. F., of which he was Past Grand Master, Past Grand Patriarch and Grand Representative to the Sovereign Lodge for 16 years. The picture is in dark brown and framed to correspond. It is a fine likeness of Mr. Kimball; the expression is one that all who knew him have seen and admired.

The lasting and stitching rooms at the shoe factory, which have been shut down for a few days, commenced work Wednesday. ## Merchants' Association Supper.

The attendance at the Merchant's Association supper at Concert Hall, Friday evening was not large, but those present enjoyed a fine baked bean and salad supper which was in charge of the Universalist Ladies' Circle, and was nicely served. The tables were set to form a square and were decorated with apple blossoms. The waitresses were Mrs. A. J. Richardson, Mrs. Herman Richardson and Anna Brooks.

After the supper the meeting was called to order by the president, Wm. C. Leavitt, who called on a number for remarks in regard to the association. The ideas expressed were all in favor of maintaining the association, which is not to be in any way detrimental to the board of trade. The work of the association is to be from the Merchant's stand point, to obtain a larger amount of trade for the merchants in town and to offer inducements for the same and also to take up special matters relative to merchants, which would not come under the work of the Board of Trade.

Maford Mann, who was appointed treasurer at the last meeting, resigned and Elmer D. Packard appointed in his place.

At this meeting it was voted to make the yearly dues, one dollar. It was also voted to offer a prize of $5.00 to the party offering the best design for a town trade mark or slogan as "Trade in Norway." The committee appointed to attend to this matter was Robert F. Bickford, Vivian Akers and Fred S. Brown.

It was voted to hold the next supper, June 23 and the matter was left with the president, who has secured the Ladies' Circle of the Universalist church to provide the supper at Concert Hall. The association is for all merchants and clerks and a large number is expected out at the meeting.

Norway Park.

In days agone Norway people had bright dreams of a Norway Park. It has been hoped that some public spirited Norway citizen, who has the welfare of the old town at heart; someone upon whom fortune has smiled; someone who would like the family name perpetuated in the old home town; someone who wants to do a good deed for the good deed's sake, would consider Norway's needs; would make another beauty spot on the face of the earth.

There is only one logical place in Norway for a park. Nature has made and adorned it as far as nature unaided can. It simply awaits further developments.

As in all public local matters, the Advertiser would like to publish different views on the park matter. Will you express them?

Annual Baazar.

Norway Bank Enlargement.

There is some talk of the Norway National Bank being enlarged. The plans call for the removing of the partitions at the rear of the bank and extending it, utilizing the room now used for the selectmen's office. If this is done, a new room will be built beyond the present selectmen's room with a continuance of the plank walk now used for entrance. The room under the office might be used by the hospital corps for their head-quarters.

IS IT RHEUMATISM?

Arn't You Really On the Wrong Track?

A good share of so-called rheumatism is caused by weak kidneys. When the kidneys fail to clear the blood of the uric acid, the acid irritates the delicate nerves. Torturing pains dart through the affected part whenever it is moved By strengthening the kidneys, Doan's Kidney Pills have proven their worth in thousands of so-called rheumatic cases, lumbago, sciatica, gravel, and urinary disorders. Doan's are well-known in Norway and warmly recommended by Norway people. Read this Norway case:

M. M. Kilgore, Danforth St., Norway, says: "I had backache and rheumatic pains for more than a year. My kidneys were the cause of the trouble. Sometimes I was so lame I could hardly stand. I did not rest much and was feeling miserable when I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I got them at Stone's Drug Store and a few boxes cured me."

THREE YEARS LATER, Mr. Kilgore said: "I have never had the slightest return of kidney trouble since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills— the same that Mr. Kilgore had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. 21-22

Don't bolt your food. Your stomach is not a food-chopper. Take time easy, while you eat, or you will soon have a hard time with your stomach. Remember your teeth are to chew with. Keep this in mind and your stomach will be grateful. Indigestion and dyspepsia are caused by fast eating. Go slow, and don't bolt your food. When your stomach is upset, your liver out of order, or your bowels need attention, take "L. F." Atwood's Medicine. It will soon settle the stomach, regulate the bile, and establish good habits. ## THE OLD STONE MILL.

By Lydia Lord Shedd.

In fair Durham's pleasant valley
Stands an old mill built of stone,
Round its feet the waters rally,
Making music of their own.

Softly gliding past the shadow,
Where the gray old turret stands,
Out into the smiling meadow,
With its bars of golden sands.

Round the bend where daisies growing,
All in gold and silver gowned,
Sweeps the river, onward flowing,
Singing ever, seaward bound.

My little boat is in the shadow,
Where I idly sit and dream,
Softly rocking 'neath the willow,
On the border of the stream.

I can see the ledges gleaming
In the sunlight, white and cold;
At their feet the cowslips teeming,
With a wealth of purest gold.

On the mill the sun is shining,
Yet its walls look cold and gray;
Over it, green branches twining,
At its base the foaming spray.

But when rain is gently falling,
It stands clothed in silver gray;
Stands like some old Quaker calling
To a comrade far away.

As upon a summer's evening,
Sounds of voices singing clear;
Some old hymn of sweetest music,
Send across the lake their cheer.

So the old mill sends its greeting
Far adown the shining stream,
To the waters swiftly fleeting,
Like the passing of a dream.

There's a cottage by the river,
Where the summer roses twine;
May they live, and bloom forever
Round that little home of thine.

I can see the blackbirds winging
Through the stately elm trees,
Where the crimson rambler's clinging,
Comes the drowsy hum of bees.

Once upon a time I wandered
Down beside the old mill-stream,
And upon my life I pondered,
As a sad and troubled dream.

Broken vows at youth's bright dawning,
When the future seemed so clear,
Darkened soon the sun of morning,
With the clouds of sadness drear.

Then a voice said: "Cease repining,"
Bade my troubled heart "Be still,"
And I saw God's promise shining
In a rainbow o'er the mill.

Blended light of earth and heaven,
In that "bow of promise" fair,
To my heart sweet peace was given,
Vanished all my dark despair.

Seemed to end that brilliant curving,
Where the earth and heaven meet,
But the purpose all unswerving,
Shall one day that arch complete.

Sometimes all my paths will brighten,
As through rifts the sunbeams shine;
Then the weary burdens lighten,
And earth's joys, so sweet, are mine.

Children's voices, laughing, chattering,
Marah's bitter cup made sweet;
Music to my ears, the pattering
Of their tiny, tottering feet.

Still along life's pathway blooming,
Flowers of love have cheered the way,
Love of dear friends in the gloaming,
Strong and true and steadfast aye.

Though by earth's horizon broken,
Fondest hopes sink out of sight;
He who bent that bow hath spoken,
And at evening shall be light.

Now with clearer visions gazing
Down the vista of the years,
Thanking Him who formed a rainbow
Through the prism of my tears.

With new faith and courage girded,
Forth I go to do His will;
In my heart the message given
Down beside the old stone mill.

THE WORK FOR SMALL MEN TO DO

Don't hate your neighbor if his creed
With your own doctrine fails to fit;
The chances that you both are wrong,
You know, are well-nigh infinite.
Don't fancy, 'mid a million worlds
That fill the silent dome of night,
The gleams of all pure truth converge
Within the focus of your sight;
For this, my friend, is not the work for you;
So leave all this for smaller men to do.

Don't hate men when their hands are hard,
And patches make their garments whole.
A man whose clothes are spick and span
May wear big patches on his soul,
Don't hate a man because his coat
Does not conform to fashion's art;
A man may wear a full-dress suit,
And have a ragamuffin heart.
This, my good friend, is not the work for you;
So leave all this for smaller men to do.

Hate not the man of narrow scope,
Of sense dull, whose brows recede,
Whose hearts are embryos; for you spring,
My dainty friend, from just this breed.
Be sure the years will lift them up;
They'll toil beneath the patient sky,
And through the vista of long days
Will all come forward by and by.
Hate not these men; this is no work for you;
So leave all this for smaller men to do.

Despite not any man that lives,
Alien or neighbor, near or far;
Go out beneath the scornful stars,
And see how very small you are,
The world is large and space is high
That sweeps around our little ken;
But there's no space or time to spare
In which to hate our fellow-men:
And, this my friend, is not the work for you;
Then leave all this for smaller men to do.

EVERY DAY A MAY-DAY.

If every day were May-Day
With flowers all ablow
And in the very hey-day
Of loveliness aglow;
If every day were May-Day
With bird-song everywhere,
And every day a gay day
Without a sign of care;
If the sun were always shining
In a sky forever blue,
We would fall a-pining
For clouds of sombre hue;
We'd tire of endless May-Day
And suns forever bright
And hail a restful gray-day
With unalloyed delight;
And though we ask thee yet to pause,
Thou fairest of the year,
We love thee all the more because
Thou art not always here.

—Marco Morrow.

WALLACE H. WHITE, JR.

Wallace H. White, Jr., was born at Lewiston in August, 1877. He attended the public schools of that city, graduating from the High School in 1895. He received his degree from Bowdoin College in 1899. In the fall of that year he went to Washington, where he accepted an appointment as Assistant Clerk to the Committee on Commerce of the United States Senate. Questions of river and harbor improvements and all bills relative to shipping came before this committee, and Mr. White acquired not only a general familiarity with these subjects of so much concern to this district, but acquainted himself with the details of committee and legislative work. He also acted as private secretary to Senator Frye, and was of assistance to him, not only in connection with these matters which came before the Committee on Commerce, but aided him in all his other Senatorial duties and activities.

Upon the death of Vice President Hobart, Mr. Frye became acting Vice President, and Mr. White was advanced to the position of Secretary to the President of the Senate. In this office he had the privilege of the floor of both Senate and House of Representatives, and of the Senate during executive sessions. His life in Washington covered four years. It was an opportunity to form acquaintances with public men, to study public questions, and to learn the practical phases of legislative work, of which he made the most.

In the fall of 1903, Mr. White began the practice of law at Lewiston, and has since devoted himself, with but a single interruption, to this work. After his return to Maine he was invited by the Department of Commerce and Labor to do certain special and confidential work for it, and as a part of this, he made an examination and report upon the systems of taxation in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Since his return to Lewiston he has been active in the religious, social, professional and political life of his community. He has always been an attendant at the Pine Street Congregational church of his home city, and for several years has served as Clerk of the Parish. He is a member of the Ariel and Calumet Clubs of Lewiston, the Lewiston Chamber of Commerce and Ashlar Lodge of Masons. He is a member of the Bar Association of the State of Maine, and has been Vice President of that body. For many years Lewiston has been the stronghold of Democracy in the State. The Republican party there has been disorganized and its vote has been pitifully small. In 1906 the Republican vote was 1152; in 1908, 1364; in 1910, 1074; in 1912, 1173, and in 1914, in a total vote of more than 4200 it fell to 851, and the Democrats went out of Lewiston with a lead over the Republican ticket of 2001 votes, and of more than 1500 over the combined Republican and Progressive votes. It is such majorities that has been electing the Democratic Congressman in this district. With a full realization of this and in an effort to make the party again dominant in the district, Lewiston Republicans began the work of reorganization in the municipal campaign of 1915. They persuaded Mr. White to be the candidate for Mayor. In that fight he received more than 2000 votes. He was again a candidate this year, and the Republican vote was increased to more than 2200. In a year's time under his leadership the voting strength of the party in Lewiston has been doubled. He has twice in succession received a larger vote than was ever before cast for any Republican candidate in Lewiston. The Party has become a militant organization, respected and feared by the Democracy. Lewiston Republicans urge that what they have accomplished merits recognition. They believe that Mr. McGillicuddy can be beaten if the vote thrown for Mr. White in the last two elections in Lewiston is even approximated in the coming campaign. They believe the fight should be made in Lewiston and Androscoggin County, and they insist that good politics call for the nomination of the candidate for Congress to whom the Republicans and independent voters of Lewiston have twice given such evidence of loyalty.

It is believed that not only would Mr. White's nomination be acceptable to the Republicans who have remained steadfast during the trials of the recent years, but would also be satisfactory to many Progressives throughout the district. The Lewiston Journal which represents this latter element, in commenting upon Mr. White's announcement of his candidacy, said of him:

"Mr. White was born in Lewiston. He is a graduate of Bowdoin College. He is 38 years old—a most seasonable age for beginning a Congressional service and if nominated and elected would enter public life at exactly the same age as did his grandfather, the late Senator William P. Frye. He is a very able lawyer and a clear and convincing public speaker. His personal and political character is such that one must have implicit confidence not only that he believes what he says but also that he has the backbone to promote in congressional life such law and public policy as he believes the well-being of the Nation demands in harmony with specific pledges. His statement of principles shows him to be neither fanatic nor reactionary, but sane and thoughtful. He is a publicist, a gentleman whose political, economic and social conclusions are evolved from wide and painstaking observation, from close study of the phenomena of political history and social development in the last two decades."

Mr. Wallace H. White, Jr., is a polished gentleman like his father and maternal grandfather. The devoted followers in the old Second District of Maine, now alive, of the late Senator William P. Frye, so long eminent and influential as one of the Great Leaders in the United States Senate and President pro tem of that body, and who might have reached the Presidency itself, through the Vice-Presidency, will rally to the support of the grandson. The announcement of his candidacy is received by them as a trumpet call to duty and an enthusiasm for him will be aroused among the young men as well, from the Canada line to the sea, which will remind the old-timers of the campaign of 1860 when the people were singing:

"Our Lincoln is the man,
With a sturdy mate,
From the Pine Tree State,
Our Lincoln is the man."

Well, as a famous queen of France said, when told that her beloved subjects had no bread: "If they have no bread, why don't they eat cake?" If the price of brooms is prohibitive, housekeepers should use vacuum cleaners.

MOTHER.

Written and read by Annie B. Hazelton for Mothers' Day program at Waterford Grange, No. 479.

The mother is the fountain head of home. When we are sick, where can we turn for succor; when we are wretched, where can we complain; and when the world looks cold and surly on us, where can we meet a warmer eye with such confidence as to a mother?

The name of Mother is one of the most sacred of all connected with human relations. No name is more sweet or precious, or expressive of more important duties or relations. And when we think of its significance as related to society and humanity we are lost in wonder and amazement. Think of the trust committed to a mother, and the immortal soul inhabiting a mortal body, to be nursed and trained, and developed and educated for Time and Eternity, a soul to be rescued from sin and Satan, to be fitted to bless the world, and to be forever blessed in Eternity!

Benjamin West said: "A kiss from my mother made me a painter." Is it not the duty of every mother to acquaint herself with the high and holy responsibilities and duties devolved upon her, and the blessed results which may through her be made sure? As the little babe is laid in her arms, its first cry awakens the tenderest love and sympathies of her nature.

The Queen that sits upon the throne of home, crowned and sceptered as none other ever can be, is Mother. Her memory is sacred while she lives, and becomes a perpetual inspiration. She is an incarnation of goodness to her child, and hence her immense power. Scotland, with her well-known reverence for motherhood, insists that "an ounce of Mother is worth more than a pound of Clergy."

If you live in the same place, let your steps be—if possible, daily—a familiar one in the old home; if you are miles away—yea, many miles away—make it your business to go to your parents: in this matter do not regard time nor expense; the one well spent, and the other will be, even a hundred fold, repaid, when some day the word reaches you, flashed over the telegraph, that your mother is gone, you will not think then much, those hours of travel which at last bore you to the loved one's side.

In after life you may have friends, fond, dear, kind friends; but never will you have again the inexpressible love and gentleness lavished upon you which none but a mother bestows. Look in those eyes, listen to that dear voice, notice the feeling of even a single touch that is bestowed upon you by that gentle hand. Make much of it while yet you have that most precious of all good gifts, a loving Mother.

Water.

The weight of the human body is about three-fifths water. Not only must water be used to build up the body, but it is absolutely necessary in carrying on the body functions, as a solvent, as a carrier of foods to the different organs and tissues, and in removing the body wastes. Although practically all foods contain water in a higher proportion than the other food principles, yet they do not furnish sufficient amounts. In addition to that furnished by the foods, three pints should be taken every day. It is just as necessary to keep the inside of our bodies washed and clean as to give the outside a bath. Lack of water is one cause of constipation.

We have looked upon our soldier boys and our battleships as the nation's toys. It has not been possible for the majority of the people to conceive the possibility of ever using these to destroy human life and even now we sincerely hope that the most strenuous duty of the soldier will be to march in the Memorial Day parade and that his brother in the navy may lead a like happy life.

COW'S COST OF LIVING.

The lower the cost of liberal feeding the wider the margin of profit on the milk produced. It makes a wide difference at the end of the month whether the feed cost is high or low. The first step toward providing feed for the cows at low cost is to grow it on the farm where the cows are kept. Even a good cow has no superior value to her owner unless she can be fed at a profit, and anyone can readily see that the margin of profits is no more measured by the quantity of milk produced in a year than by the cost of feed required to produce it.

In order to make my points clear it may, perhaps, be well to explain the difference between cost and value in figuring the cost of feeding the dairy cow. Most dairy farmers who attempt to keep books use value instead of cost in their calculations. Such figures are not accurate; are not made up as they should be. It is easily possible for a scant crop to represent a far greater cost than the prevailing market value, so that the man who feeds out a short crop is fooling himself if he only uses market price as its cost. Vice versa, the man who has an enormous yield, a yield well above the average, is in all probability putting a substantial intermediate profit into his dairy feeding calculation if he charges the cattle with the full selling value of the feed. In so far as the production of the farm is concerned, the cost has no relation whatever to the market value. In the case of purchased grain brought to the farm, the market value, with something added for handling, becomes the cost to the farm.

The grasses and forage crops are the cheapest feeding materials that can be supplied for the cows. To the extent that the grasses and forage crops, green, siloed, or dry, can be utilized for the cows, to that extent will the resulting milk product be cheapened. The fact is, dairy farmers have been overlooking, in the past ruling of low prices for grain feeds, both the feeding value and the possibilities of production of grasses and forage crops. The day of cheap grain feeds is gone, while recent experiments with grasses and forage crops are opening our eyes to the feed value of these crops. On reasonably fertile soils the valuable, digestic, nutritious material, suited for milk production, can be produced, and put before the cows at less cost in the form of grasses and forage crops than with other kinds of feed material.

These grasses and forage crops grown green or cured, make up a nearly balanced ration, or a ration so perfect that the cows will thrive and keep in good condition while giving a liberal flow of milk with but a small quantity of grain feed. Considering the quantity of suitable food that can be grown on an acre, and at a small cost, it is easily seen that in the production of low cost milk they hold a prominent place and should receive more attention from appreciative dairy farmers.

Furthermore, if these grasses and forage crops are grown on the farm and in proper rotation with corn and small grain crops—the needed grain can in a large measure be produced on the farms where needed at less cost than by purchase in the markets, as is the common practice with dairy farmers. Corn for forage, silage and grain and grasses and clovers for pasturage and dry roughage make up a choice list of feeding materials. Oats and peas, adapted to conditions in most northern localities, can be produced at reasonable advantage by any dairy farmer wanting them for his use. They are a grain feed that well suits the deficiencies of the other crops. While it will not make a strictly scientifically balanced ration, it will leave a very acceptable balance in the pocket of the dairy farmer who feeds it to good cows.

TOWN BEAUTIFUL MOVEMENT

The prevailing mode of town development for the past 25 years in progressive towns has been to lay out streets in checkerboard form at right angles. Some theorists of civic progress have advanced the idea that the layout of curving streets is more beautiful. They point to German cities that followed the plan to a large extent before the war. The right angled plan they condemn as too stiff, formal and geometrical.

In towns having hills or bluffs, curving streets are frequently only needful to conform to the lay of the land. But there are some practical objections to them on level ground. They usually make more steps for man and beast, though it is true that in some instances they do cut corners. They lead to irregular shaped lots, and promote a more scattered development of the town, necessitating larger expense for street and sidewalk and sewer development.

The laying out of streets is a matter to be strictly controlled by municipal authorities. In the more progressive towns it is usually so regulated. In some of the older and less advanced places, there is a disposition to allow real estate men to run streets in any criss-cross way that will produce the most house lots. Straight streets connecting with each other directly across a town have a beauty of their own. If well planted with trees, long and pleasing vistas are created, making a harmonious whole, and giving an impression of space and dignified arrangement.

A great number of cities have of late taken up the idea of town planning boards. Few men would think of constructing a house without a plan. If it is a house of much value, they call in a first class architect. But until within a few years, most towns were content to grow without any publicly adopted plan for development. The result is frequently crazy patchwork streets, the lack of suitable park land, the failure to secure lots needed in the future for schools and other public buildings, for which high prices will have to be paid later.

What Maine is Doing.

The Second Annual Maine State Exposition which can well be called "What Maine is and what Maine is doing," will be held for two weeks at Portland, starting June 5.

Here will be shown the things that are produced by manufactories in all parts of the Pine Tree State, gathered together in the greatest exhibition hall north of Boston. It is not a money-making enterprise, but is an exhibition, an effort on the part of the Portland Chamber of Commerce which is providing the management and the expense of management to show Maine people what a great state this is and what the opportunities are. The exposition will also convince the thousands of summer visitors, who will be on hand when the show opens that Maine is one of the most important industrial states of the Union.

HEBRON.

Two Records Broken.

The Harvard interscholastic meet at the Stadium, Saturday, in which Hebron won third place, was featured by the work of J. T. Murphy of Hebron in breaking the records in the shot put and the hammer throw, his best heave was 171 feet, 7 inches, which smashed the mark made by L. D. Howard of Worcester academy in 1910—164 feet, 4 inches. After the event was over Murphy smashed his own new record, heaving the 12 pound ball 174 feet, 2 inches on the first attempt. He made two other attempts to better this mark, but fouled. Murphy put the 12 pound shot 49 feet, 10 1-2 inches, which beat the record made by Richard Folsom Cleveland, son of Grover Cleveland, in 1915. Young Cleveland was then a student at Exeter. Hebron's 17 points were made as follows: 10 for Muhphy's two record breaking performances; 3 for C. A. Damm's winning second place in the hammer throw. He also broke the old record with a hurl of 169 feet, 8 1-2 inches.

PIGEON HILL.

Pigeon Hill is fast being turned into a state highway. Marco Lavorgna of Canton, has contracted for the job and has been two weeks at work. The severe rain of last Wednesday was a serious drawback, but the work is progressing nevertheless. A crew of thirty Italians are camped over in John King's pasture and Mrs. John King is boarding the teamsters. Mrs. Augustus Thayer also boards two overseers and Mrs. Mattie Haskell boards Mr. Merrill, the chief engineer. The farmers gladly furnish stonewalls for the road bed, and gravel comes from King's pit. The road will be completed by August 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Denning were in East Oxford, Sunday to see Mrs. Denning's father, Robert Thomas.

Mr. John King was unable to travel this mail route, Thursday on account of bad washouts, but the day of the rain he made it with his car 27 miles and delivered the mail in two hours.

Oxford Grange met in the vestry of the church, Saturday night. The building of the hall is progressing finely and a committee of five ladies was appointed to confer with the carpenters about the arrangement of the kitchen. Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Dory were reinstated to membership. Reports of committees of various articles. The lecturer's program consisted of a talk on improving home grounds by Geo. Tyner. Discussion, causes of fire losses on farms. (a) care of ashes, gasoline, Chas. Denning. (b) Brush and grass fire, Lincoln Chaplin, both were instructive and well worth listening to. Then came a question box, one slip of paper read, How may I keep peace with my wife and keep from mowing the lawn?

Herbert Mayberry has returned from the hospital and is gaining well.

John King and Orin Martin are having poplar and fir bolts cut from their timber lot.

DENMARK

C. E. Cobb started slipping logs Sunday. There were a lot of spectators as usual.

On account of the rain and wash-outs the Denmark Dramatic club gave their show Thursday night instead of Wednesday, as was billed. They played to a crowded hall and every one was well pleased. "The Chimes of the China Clock" was something new and showed eight pretty girls in graceful dancing and latest songs. There were 29 people in the show and Mr. Johnson of Brownfield used his moving picture machine for their spot light. The show was under the direction of Mrs. Mabel Emery.

Beatrice Bartlett of Brownfield spent the week-end with Mrs. Alvina Richardson.

There was an auto accident in town, Friday. Hiram Legoff while driving his car to Brownfield ran into Mr. Seeley's team, breaking the cart and smashing the car quite a little. They all got off very lucky without broken bones.

We understand Sherman Hartford has exchanged the Witham place for an Overland car.

The Brownfield base ball team played the Denmark team at Denmark, Saturday. Score 8 to 6 in favor of Brownfield.

Billy Sunday told an audience of country editors the other day that editors are preachers and some of them have most of the preachers skinned a block, that crime would be 100 per cent. greater if we had no newspapers; that newspapers stand for morality; that vice is a carbuncle, but would be twice as big if it were not for the newspapers. It seems to be up to the newspaper editors, after this, to boom Billy, if there's any such thing as reciprocity.

Many people suffer the tortures of lame muscles and stiffened joints because of impurities in the blood, and each succeeding attack seems more acute until rheumatism has invaded the whole system.

To arrest rheumatism it is quite as important to improve your general health as to purify your blood. And the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is nature's great blood-maker, while its medicinal nourishment strengthens the organs to expel the impurities and upbuild your strength.

Scott's Emulsion is helping thousands every day who could not find other relief.

Delano-Haskell.

At the residence of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. LeLano, Saturday evening, the Rev. A. R. Williams officiating, took place the marriage of Harry Cook DeLano, a well known and popular ball player, and Erma Beatrice Haskell, of Turner, a graduate of Leavitt Institute. This was the culmination of a friendship formed at the former school in 1911.

The single ring service was used. The decorations consisted of wild-flowers and evergreens. The bride was gowned in white voile with taffeta trimmings and carried white pinks. Only relatives of the families were present. The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Prince of Turner, uncle and aunt of the bride, and the Misses S. B. and Z. S. Prince of Norway, also aunts of the bride.

The couple came down-stairs as the wedding march was played by Ida Stone, and stood under an arch of evergreen and wild-flowers.

They had a large number of beautiful and useful presents. While the company was enjoying the refreshments the couple slipped out and had been gone for half an hour before they were missed.

Mr. and Mrs. DeLano will be at home to their friends after June 15 at New Hampton, Iowa.

Question box, conducted by ... Supt. Holden

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served and a social hour followed. The teachers and schools show a marked improvement, the result of these meetings during the year. A better understanding exists between teachers and parents, also.

L. H. Dunn has recently purchased an automobile. Several others in town are also running new ones. G. B. Turner is using one on his Otisfield route.

A meeting of the school board was held Monday night to take action on the proposed union with Mechanic Falls in forming a union. There seems to be a feeling throughout the town that such a union is not desirable.

As usual in dramas the right triumphed at the climax, and the good young man won the girl he loved. All took their parts well with no hesitency, and the evening was an enjoyable one from start to finish. The orchestra from the school furnished music. A dance followed the play. On account of the high water at the Hobb's pond the dam went out, Thursday afternoon, May 18th. An attempt was made to stop the flow of water by men working most of the night, but without success until several feet of water had left the lake. It did much damage to the roads and territory through which it run. The last of the week a crew of men were at work building a dam which will hold most of the water.

SETTING COLORS.

The safest method in setting colors is to always "set" the color before washing the cloth.

The most common way is to use salt, about the proportion of a cupful to one-half gallon of water, and before the goods is made up soak it in this mixture for a few hours. It has been found by experimenting, however, that different colors respond to the different "fixers," as they are called, and that it is well for the housewife to study both her material and medium. Salt has been found most satisfactory in setting browns, blacks and pinks. For blues, use vinegar in the proportion of half a cupful of vinegar to 1 gallon of water. For lavenders, sugar of lead is more often used, 1 tablespoonful of sugar of lead to 1 gallon of water being the proportion.

For iron rust lay the cloth containing the stain over a bowl containing a quart of water and a teaspoonful of borax. Apply to the stain hydrochloric acid drop by drop until the stain brightens and then immediately pour hot water through it. Continue until the stain disappears, rinsing each time.

For bloodstains use lukewarm water, and after the stained article has soaked, wash with a brown soap and warm water or with ammonia and warm water.

For inkstains, after wetting the spot with cold water, apply oxalic acid drop by drop, and after allowing it to stand for a few seconds rinse in water to which a little ammonia or soap has been added.

Almost all fruit stains may be removed by soaking in boiling water. In case any member of the family upsets a cup of chocolate or tea, use cold water to remove the spot. In the case of coffee pour boiling water from a height. Brushing the stain with borax beforehand assists.

Maine Sportsmen's Association.

Plans for the 21st annual midsummer outing of the Maine Sportsmen's Fish and Game Association are nearly completed, and from every indication it will be the biggest in the history of that organization. The place is Mountainview House, Rangeley Lakes, and the dates June 29-30 and July 1.

As usual, the shooting events will be the big feature. Among the features will be a guides' and wardens' match on a running deer target, between picked teams. There will also be matches for those who never have won prizes, to stimulate interest among those who do not class with the experts, but who would like to take part.

Women in British Workshops.

Hardly less remarkable than the swift transformation of England into a powerful military nation has been the silent upheaval that has placed the civil work and the industries of the workshops in the hands of women. It has been estimated from official figures that there were fully 2,000,000 more women in active employ on March 1, 1916, than on the corresponding day twelve months earlier.

Moreover, the number is increasing week by week. Every class of women, including those previously regarded as leisure and well-to-do, are adding to the total. The call is reaching the remotest hamlets as well as the quiet market towns and the women and girls are responding. The women are mobilizing in a great army, ready to serve wherever they are most needed—even to the hard labor of tilling the soil.

PROLONGING YOUTH.

If there is any one thing that distinguishes our age from the ages that have gone before it is the prolongation of youth. Formerly a girl who didn't marry before her twenty-third summer was looked upon as a hopeless old maid and if by thirty-five she had not entered the married state her future was decreed to be life servitude in the families of her married kindred as guide, philosopher and friend to other people's children. Now she is considered young enough at twenty-seven and if she does not choose to work for her board and clothes for some man she has the whole world to choose from to sustain herself.

A man is no longer considered old at fifty or sixty. No longer does he cultivate the flowing and patriarchal beard and become a reminiscence of the past. He does not throw away all his activities and retire to senility. As Dr. C. W. Saleeby a London physician who knows something about psychology, admirably puts it: "If your arteries are soft, if you still believe in life and love and friendship and the future, it does not matter a straw how old your body may be; you are still young for your soul is young, and youth is a state of the soul." He adds that the revolution that is taking place in our ideas of youth and age means the union of two precious things, enthusiasm and experience, which to our ancestors appeared incompatible.

One result of the change must be that we shall have fewer youthful prodigies. William Pitt was Prime Minister of England at twenty-four, but today politicians of like age are usually merely "boy orators" whose sky rockets of eloquence go off harmlessly in the air. Today the statesman of forty is only in his apprenticeship in the work of government. Youth will have to wait longer because it will last longer. Withal, age will be genial, not harsh, and the young may learn from those who, though growing old, still retain the spirit of youth and enthusiasm, how to enjoy the passing years wisely. It is not a crime or even a misfortune to grow old, but it is either a crime or misfortune to have one's soul, his enthusiasm, his initiative, his enjoyment of the best things of life dry up whether he is thirty or sixty.

THE TREATMENT OF ANIMALS BY SCIENCE.

How many animals are used, how are they treated, and is there much useless repetition of experiments, cruelty, and abuse of the dogs, monkeys, cats and smaller animals used for research purposes in our laboratories, hospitals and places where serums and vaccines are made?

These are the questions to which an answer is sought by a bill recently introduced into Congress by Senator Gallinger, of New Hampshire, and Representative Julius Kahn of California, and referred to the committees of agriculture in both houses. It instructs the secretary of agriculture to make such an investigation and report the results.

According to the official report of the British Government, there were, in 1914 about 80,000 animals used in Great Britain for experimental purposes. Taking into consideration the larger number of persons engaged in medical research, the freedom from any regulative or restrictive laws, the many endowments for research purposes, and the enterprising spirit of our scientific men, the number of animals used yearly in this Country must, in comparison with the English figures, run into some hundreds of thousands.

Under existing conditions this large number of our "four-footed friends" are absolutely under control of the individual. The professional men and women engaged in research through animal experimentation are about the only class to whom society gives absolute trust and confidence and permits their perfect freedom from restraint.

Are we justified in this confidence? Are we neglecting our responsibility in this direction, while we recognize it so fully in the care with which we guard against and prevent cruelty to animals by the public generally as is evidenced by the humane laws and the hundreds of Societies for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals which exist throughout the Country, but which have no application or jurisdiction where animals are used for experimental purposes.

The answer to these questions will be made clearer if this bill becomes effective and we believe that it should receive the support of all persons who claim humanitarian feelings, whether professional or layman.

PREPAREDNESS.

"When you git to talkin' 'preparedness,'" quoth the Old Guide to the crowd in the bunk house one evening, "jest consider the onprepossessin' but high efficient porkypine, waddlin' his happy an' careless way thru' the most dangersome sections of this here wilderness all by his lonesome self, hurtin' nothin' ner nobody onless Old Man Trouble knocks at his door." "An' when thet happens," continued the Old Guide, "there's gin'rally suthin' doin' fer whoever started the rumpus, an' in most cases Ole Porky comes out with colors a-flying at the end of the shindy." "He don't want trouble with no noe, bein' stric'ly vegetarian his'self, an' few of the woods critters so far fergit theirselves ez to try an' make a lunch of him, knowin' his capabilities in the way of infightin' en' sech likt matters."

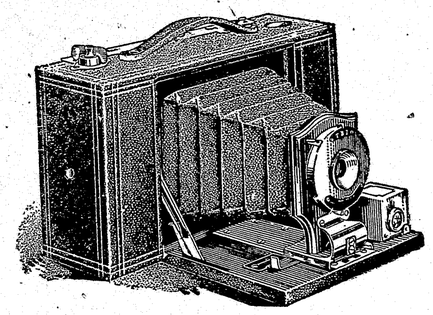

"Ef he falls out uv a tree ten or fifteen feet it don't matter a hul lot his thick quills and fat covering pertect his ole bones prettey well, an' the way he waddles off into the lake or stream, floatin' high as a cake of thet Ivory Soap, shows you how well he's fixed fer any an' all emergencies." "When he comes to a steep hill an' feels lazy, all he does is curl up on his self and let Ike Newton's Law of Gravitation act as his elevator, savin' energy an' time." "An' he depends on no one fer his grub; tree bark an' young shoots suits him fine, so he is fat an' happy all winter long, while other critters mostly hev to kill each other or go hungry." "Jest about the best prepared critter in the hul durn woods, he is, an' ef he weren't so hombly lookin' he'd make a darn fine National Symbol of Preparedness to stick on buttons an' badges." And the other guides were content to admit that there was sooth in the old timer's statements.

—Kennebec Journal.

PASSING OF THE ELM HOUSE

I visited the Elm House,
I passed its portal old,
And stood within its grimy walls,
With history untold.

There the moon's pale light shone in,
Which added to the gloom,
Where once we gathered at the feast,
And danced to merry tunes.

Then as I slowly groped about,
And walked with footsteps slow,
There came a voice that seemed to say:
"Please save me 'ere I go."

High, high above the lonesome street,
I climbed the staircase tall.
My footsteps broke the silence deep,
Along the vacant hall.

We shall in all the years to come,
In memory hold thee dear,
The stranger sheltered from the storm,
Received a welcome here.

Like unto thee, we are passing on,
Surely one by one we fall;
We shall miss you, dear old Elm House,
You have been a friend to all.

Norway, Me. —Frederick M. Davis.

"THAT THAT THAT THAT."

It May Be Used Correctly Seven Successive Times.

"I'll prove the word that I have made my theme
Is that that may be doubled without blame;
And that that that thus trebled I may use,
And that that that that critics may abuse
May be correct. Further, the Dons to bother,
Five that may closely follow one another;
For be it known that we may safely write
Or say that that that that that man writ was right;
Nay, e'en that that that that that followed
Through six repeats the grammar's rule has hallowed,
And that that that (that that that that began)
Repeated seven times is right; deny it who can."

The Laconia, N. H., Democrat says: And now an inventor claims to have solved the problem of cheap fuel for motor car engines of all kinds, by discovering a substitute for gasoline. The inventor takes a gallon of pure water, mixes it with about a teaspoonful of greenish powder and behold he produces a fuel which seems to have all the explosive power of gasoline and costs only one per cent per gallon. Reliable parties who have investigated his claims, report that they have emptied the tank of his car and carefully examined the machine to make sure that there were no connections with any secret tank; that they have sampled the water with which the tank was then finned and found it to be pure water; have watched the inventor drop in the little dose of green powder and then start the engine, the car operating precisely as if the tank was filled with good quality gasolene. If the inventor makes good and places his invention on the market, motor car tourists will no longer be troubled about running short of gasolene, for they can carry a can of the powder in their cars and stop at any roadside well or brook and fill their tanks with water, drop in a pinch of powder and proceed, while of course the cheapness of such a fuel would revolutionize the whole power problem, even as the Keeley motor promised to do some years ago.

Does Your Dress Match Your Eyes?

"People with light hair and blue eyes can wear blues; people with brown eyes can wear brown, blues and other colors according to the degree of color in their complexion." "An Auburn-haired girl with brown eyes should wear colors to correspond with her hair.

A woman with dark hair can wear a wider range of color than one with light or auburn hair. If she has blue eyes and a rosy complexion she can wear almost any color, unless some of the red tints and shades would reflect too much color in her cheeks.

Every one has one color they feel best and look best in and they should find it, wear it frequently and be satisfied."

RELICS

The relics of the past: we find them everywhere; turn our eyes where we will, we see something that speaks of the "loved and lost," mementos that bring before us the loved ones that went to their rest years ago, but we have been so long accustomed to think of them as among the things of the past that rarely the sleeping memories are stirred; but the last one, called home from earth, we see at every step, something to remind us of the joys forever fled; no more of the pleasant reunions after absence, when all of the kindliest feelings of the heart gush forth—no more bright anticipations of the return we had hoped and prayed for so earnestly. Our Heavenly Father has ordered it otherwise, and we must bow in meek submission to the rod that chasteneth us.

The heart will sometimes rebel when we long in vain for a sound of the loved voice or a glimpse of the dear face that is hidden forever from our sight. All the consolation left us is to look forward to the happy reunion on the "shining shores" where no tear shall ever fall, no parting ever come; another one at home where storms cannot wreck, nor tempests toss; another link in the chain, transferred from earth to heaven. Why should we weep that another cord is loosed, that binds us to earth, and why forget that earthly death is a heavenly birth.

True it is, that there is an aching void in the old home that can never be filled for those who plead so earnestly for that one dear life so precious to them; it could not be granted, and now:

"Another hand is beckoning us,
Another call is given,
And glows once more with angel steps
The path that leads to Heaven.
Unto our Father's will alone,
One thought has reconciled:
That He, whose love exceedeth ours,
Has taken home, His child."

A Puzzle from Puzzledom.

I got acquainted with a young widow, who lived with her step-daughter in the same house. I married the widow; my father fell, shortly afterwards, in love with the step-daughter of my wife, and married her. My wife became the mother-in-law and also the daughter-in-law of my own father; my wife's step-daughter is my step-mother, and I am the step-father of my mother-in-law. My step-mother, who is the step-daughter of my wife, has a boy; he is naturally my step-brother, because he is the son of my father and of my step-mother; but because he is the son of my wife's step-daughter, so is my wife the grandmother of the little boy, and I am the grandfather of my step-brother. My wife has also a boy; my step-mother is consequently the step-sister of my boy, and is also his grandmother, because he is the child of her step-son; and my father is the brother-in-law of my son, because he has got his step-sister for a wife. I am the brother of my own son, who is the son of my step-mother; I am the brother-in-law of my mother, my wife is the aunt of her own son, my son is the grandson of my father, and I am my own grandfather.

FRYEBURG

Golden Wedding.

The fiftieth marriage anniversary of Andrew H. Evans and Huldah Heath Evans was celebrated at their home on Main street Wednesday evening. It was attended by a large number of friends and guests from surrounding towns. The home was opened from rooftree to dooryard and the rooms were very beautifully decorated with a profusion of apple blossoms.

Mr. and Mrs. Evans were assisted in receiving the visitors by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Evans and Wilson Evans of Philadelphia.

Two daughters also came to the Fryeburg home to take part in a notable occasion, Mrs. Virginia Purrington of Burlington, Vt., and Alice Evans of Boston. The sons, Frank Evans of Philadelphia and Robie Evans, who is a government forester in Oregon, were not present.

During the reception Mrs. A. M. Abbott gave piano selections. Later vocal solos were contributed by Mrs. Charlotte Lowell and Mrs. Fred Fife.

Refreshments were served at the close of the musical selections. Mrs. Purrington read a number of letters address to her parents, among them were greetings from Rev. Ernest H. Abbott of the Outlook, a former pastor of the Congregational church; Miss Helen Sewell of Berwick whose father performed the wedding ceremony of a half century ago; Miss Mary Farnham, Forest Grove, Oregon; Dr. Seth C. Gordon, Portland and Ridgeley Clark of Connecticut.

Many tokens of love and remembrance were received by Mr. and Mrs. Evans, especially of interest was the presentation of fifty dollars in gold by Fred Fife in behalf of the citizens of Fryeburg.

Mr. Evans made an appropriate response to the gift and with hearty good wishes for more golden years the company dispersed.

Mrs. Seth Page died very suddenly. She was attending the Evans' golden wedding, when a serious attack of heart disease caused her death. Mrs. Page leaves a daughter, Clara Page and a son, Edward N. Page of Portland.

NOW ELECTRICITY IS PRODUCED

The Central Station Power House Keeps No Electricity in "Stock"—Must be Ready to Make it as Fast as it is used

No matter how much electricity is used for light, heat and power one seldom gives a thought to how this wonderful force is created and distributed for our service and convenience. At the pressure of a button the electric lamp bursts into brilliant light, the electric range is ready for cooking or the vacuum cleaner begins its sanitary work.

Whence comes this mysterious force? How is electricity produced?

Contrary to what most of us may be lead to believe electricity is not kept in stock at the electric light station, or power house, thet same as sugar, flour or other necessary commodities are kept in a grocery store. Neither is it stored up, like water in the city reservoir, ready to be used on demand. When we turn the faucet at the sink the water which gushes forth has been stored in a large reservoir and conducted to the city through large iron pipes and then through smaller pipes to the house where it is to be used.

No such system is employed in producing and distributing electricity. Electricity must be made at the power house the moment it is used. No matter how many lamps you have in your home, the lighting company must have the machinery ready to light these lamps at any moment, day or night. As a rule a few of the lamps are used one at a time, but the central station must have the capacity to take care of all of them. This applies to your neighbors as well, and a lot of electrical machinery must be kept standing idle in the power house in order to be ready for instant "peak load."

Electricity is a form of energy. It requires power to produce it. At the central electric light station the machines which produce electric current, called generators, are driven by steam, or gas, engines, or by waterwheels. The lectrical generator merely changes the mechanical energy of the steam engine, or the waterwheel, into electrical energy. Electricity cannot be seen, it cannot be "handled," yet it is mistaken notion that we do not know much about it. We really know a great deal about it. We can measure its pressure, or voltage, its flow, or amperage, its work, or wattage. We can make it do a thousand tasks, to answer our every order and whim.

The electrical current produced by the generators is carried by heavy cables to a switchboard, which is merely a convenient device to handle and distribute the current about the city over slender wires as needed. This switchboard carries the measuring instruments, the switches which send the current out over the various lines, etc. One switch "throws on" the street lighting circuit at dusk, and throws it off again at daylight. Another controls the power circuit, another the lighting circuit and so on.

The question of electricity is also very puzzling. Most of us cannot understand why we should pay more for electric light than for electric ranges or for electric power. This is easily explained. We use the electric lamps only a part of the day, often for only six or eight hours in the evening. The rest of the day the lamps are not burned, but thet lighting company must maintain its plant, and keep its force and machines ready for twenty-four hours a day in order to serve all the people for the few hours the lamps are required. It must always be ready for the "peak," or high load. The factory, on the other hand, uses the maximum amount of power during the day when the lights are not turned on. In proportion to the amount of capital invested to take care of the factory, the factory is a more profitable customer than the householder, and therefore the central station can afford to sell power to it cheaper than it can afford to sell it to the householder. And the factory buys its current in large quantities, where the average householder buys it a few dollar's worth of current a month. It is the same law of heavy buying that maintains throughout the business world in purchasing any material or product. That is why the manufacturer gets power cheaper.

This is also true of electric heating and cooking. The central station can afford to sell current cheaper for cooking purposes, because the customer will use this current during the day, when the light load is not on, and he will use a great deal more of it. Therefore, it is customary to charge from ten cents to fifteen cents a kilowatt for electric lighting, from three cents to five cents for electric heating and cooking and a somewhat lower rate where it is used in large quantities for manufacturing.

DISTRICT COUNTY ALMSHOUSES.

The State Board of Charities and Corrections in its report, expressing its opinion that the town is too small a unit to economically maintain an almshouse, stating that the law providing for a union of towns in maintaining such an institution was entirely a dead letter, and recommended that county or district almshouses should be established by direct provision of law.

Several of the towns which have an almshouse frankly admit that they cannot afford to maintain it. Others are maintaining them with only a few inmates, or none at all, and the overseers of the poor say that it must be kept open for use in case of necessity.

One hundred and four almshouses were maintained during the year 1915 in Maine. Seven, when inspected, had no inmates. Fifteen had but one, 12 had only two. Half of them had four or less. Only 17 had more than ten. The average was six.

In other states experts who have made a careful study of the problem in several states regard the Indiana plan which provides for county almshouses with temporary outdoor relief given at the expense of the township as the best. Forty states out of 49 carry on their poor relief through county almshouses; while Rhode Island and the District of Columbia each have one large almshouse. Several states are planning to consolidate their county almshouses into larger districts. Probably the state best illustrative of conditions like our own, yet having county instead of town almshouses, is our sister state, New Hampshire. New York is the next county almshouse state near us and the average is practically the same as in New Hampshire, where the last report of the state board of charities shows that the average cost per inmate for ten counties was $2.62 per week or $132.24 per annum.

Now, then, if we apply the cost of these towns as given above, and they represent a fair average of the conditions in our almshouses throughout the state, to the population of the towns maintaining almshouses, it is found that the total cost of the 104 maintained in 1915, was approximately $89,349, or if the whole state were to maintain city or town almshouses, $262,601. Taking the average number of inmates in almshouses in those towns, which, maintain one, as a basis, the average number of persons through the whole state to be cared for in institutions of this kind would be 1,485.

It would cost to care for these on the basis of the New Hampshire county almshouse, $202,316, a saving over the figures above given for the present plan of $60,285 per annum. But let us be more liberal, let us allow $3 per week or $156 per annum, and even so, the savings each year still amounts to $30,941.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THRIFT.

People approaching middle age who live from hand to mouth, and are able to save little or nothing, begin to look forward to old age with apprehension. Even when they have children able and willing to give them food and shelter, there is a feeling of dependence in accepting, which is repugnant to a self-respecting man or woman. To minister to the helplessness of childhood is a very different thing from ministration to indigent old age which put off the practice of thrift until there was no longer any possibility of saving money. The father or mother who spends without stint in giving the young folk a "good time" often repents in bitterness of spirit that some part of the money squandered upon luxuries and follies was not set aside to secure independence.

Some remarkable figures published by S. W. Strauss, President of the American Society for Thrift, indicate how general is the failure to make provision for that period in life when earning power ceases. In the United States, says Mr. Strauss, 66 out of every 100 people that die leave no estate whatever. Of the remaining 34 only 9 leave more than $5,000, and the average of the balance of 25 is a little less than $1,300. He further states that at the age of 65, 97 out of every 100 are partly or wholly dependent upon relatives, friends, or the public for food, clothing, etc. In the United States, according to government statistics, 98 per cent. of the American people are living from day to day on their wages, and a loss of employment would mean pauperism for all but 2 per cent. Figures like those presented by Mr. Strauss may set some careless folk thinking along right lines.

WASTE NOT, WANT NOT.

This country is beginning to wake up to the necessity of conserving all of its wasted material. Paper, rags, rubbers, lead, copper, bottles, bones, zinc, iron and inumerable other things, which have for years been consigned to the ash barrel and carted away to the dumps have a value that is represented in dollars and cents, and there is need of this being saved.

The consumption of all metals, as the result of the great European war, and the wonderful advance made by the automobile industry is astounding, and there is, therefore, great need for the saving of everything that can be converted into raw material again and made over into the finished product.

Save for the junkman. Here are the prices which he should pay you, and if he does not come up to this standard of prices dismiss him and find somebody who will give you the price which the market demands: Folded newspapers, 25 to 30 cents for 100 pounds; white rags, 3 to 4 cents a pound; mixed rags, 1 to 2 cents a pound; rubbers, 7 to 7 1-2 cents a pound; auto tires, 5 to 7 cents a pound; bycicle tires, 2 to 2 1-2 cents a pound; iron, 25 to 30 cents for 100 pounds; steel, 30 to 50 cents for 100 pounds; zinc, 7 to 10 cents a pound; lead 5 to 5 1-2 cents a pound; copper, 14 to 18 cents per pound; pewter, 15 to 20 cents per pound; bottles, 1-2 to 1 cent each; bones 1-4 to 1-2 cents per pound.

CHANCES IN A TRENCH.

They're Three Hundred to One You're Not Killed.

If I were asked to tell the most extraordinary fact about life out here I should say it is the absence or fewness of new emotions of any kind and the rarity of fear.

And it is true, that when the western front is not active, when, in fact it is as this winter has seen it, life here is not very fearful, and is such that the ordinary man with the average amount of nervousness may live without serious injury to body or nervous system.

Whether or not one can indict, on these facts, the colonel of the novel who used to tell us men of ignorant peace that the man who said shell fire left him unmoved was a liar and a coward to boot is doubtful; for the colonel thought no doubt of heavy shell fire in the open when men fell in heaps, whereas we have the protection of trenches so good that except in heavy bombardments casualties are not numerous.

I remember when we left England the physically brave among us said, "I expect to be blue with funk the first time we are shelled and probably jumpy the first week or two in the trenches" and I recall that the first time we came out of trenches we confided to one another that it wasn't half so awful as we had expected, and one said, quite honestly too, "I think men who are frightened by it exist only in penny novelties."

So that the "story" of the western front on average days is that going to war is a huge "business"—so many days in the trenches, with dirt, fatigue, loss of sleep and anxious moments and then so many days out, with concerts and little dinners, perhaps, and certainly baths, a change of underclothes, tolerably good food, reading and writing, much football, and long nights of blessed sleep.

And if I were to reduce these facts to figures I would say that, given ordinary fortune, in the ordinary spell in the trenches, the chances are 100 to 1 that you do not receive a scratch and about 300 to 1 that you are not killed. I base the figures on the casualties my battalion has suffered in trenches in different parts of the line.

Obviously these figures are very reassuring to the most nervous of men and to those who by reason of their responsibilities at home have least desire to die. But this common-sense confidence was non-operative the first day in trenches or the first time under shell fire.

Yet our indifference was, I say it emphatically, as great then as it has ever been since. And the reasons were firstly, that we were so intensely interested in everything that we had little time to think of danger; secondly, that the trenches give, and rightly, a sense of security that is justified; and thirdly, that the army routine had already robbed the imaginative among us of that nervous tension and that imagination that were ours in civil life, and that we were consequently slow to realize danger.

Impressions of first facing death must of necessity be personal, but in all probability they applied to most of us. I first ran imminent risk of being killed when I stood at night as a sentry with my head above the parapet.

It was dark, and I stared out towards the German lines two hundred yards away, faintly discerning our barbed wire five yards away.

It was quiet, and I resolved that I was really very safe, because they could not see me, and even if they could, my own rifle shooting told me that a head is not always hit at short range. True, my rifle firing told them where I was, but the flash of a rifle is momentary, followed by blackness, and no matter how good your eyesight is you cannot very definitely fix in the dark the spot where a flash came from a second before. You may fix it to a yard, but a head is small, and the head may be shifted a yard or two away.

Further, not only had sentries already stood unhit in that very spot for hours that night, but sentries were standing so at intervals both in our lines and those of the enemy from the North sea to Switzerland, cheerfully and unconcernedly.

But what of the machine guns, you may say, that sweep or traverse the parapets, covering every inch of them from time to time? True, the great danger lies there. But a machine gun makes a big noise, a clackety-clack that can be heard a long way, and unless you have the misfortune to be standing at the spot where the gun is first aimed you have ample time to "duck" your head while the bullets fly overhead. So sentry-go seemed, and is, tolerably safe.

Shells are different, trench mortars are different, mines are different; but a somewhat similar common-sense reasoning is applicable to them all.

I was walking along a road behind the trenches one morning, a road bounded by fields on the right and scattered houses on the left. I was alone, making my way with a message to a working party. It was a calm, glorious morning. The war seemed a long way off.

Suddenly there was a whistling, a wailing that every instant was nearer, then a bang, and 30 yards away in the field a little fountain of black earth, a round hole, and bits of earth or metal whizzing past my head. I screwed my head round, stopped, and when the whizzing stopped, walked on. A man poked his head out of a house, grinned, and went in again. That was my first shell.

Another came a few moments later. The same whizzing bits, and this time a rather uncomfortable feeling and a strange idea that to turn one's collar up would be a good plan. The correct thing, I had read, was to throw oneself on the ground—but the road was dirty, and lying down seemed decidedly infra dig. The correct thing, I assured myself, was to walk on as unconcernedly as might be—and, anyway, there was plenty of room for shells to fall without hitting me, and * * *

Another shell and a bursting out of a house of some Scottish soldiers, laughing and asking each other what color of wooden crosses they wanted.

As we marched back in our fours small high-explosive shells fell in ruined houses 10 yards to our left. At every whistle we "ducked" our heads a bit, still marching, of course, and after every report we looked at each other and laughed. And we all thought that the space occupied by each one of us was infinitesimal, and that the chance of being hit by a shell fired at nothing in particular was remote.

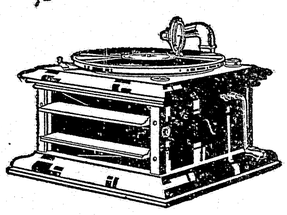

Similarly, mines cannot explode everywhere, and they do not go up every day. Even—and this is the worst case—if you know the trench you are in is mined it is highly unlikely that you will go up while you are in it. And, as for trench mortars, well, you may see them coming wobbling through the air and you may run for a second or two without the danger zone.

Remembering all these things as we do, and having in addition either a profound belief that Providence will look after us, or a stoical fixed idea of the inexorable character of Fate—that what will be will be—it is easy to account for lack of real fear, and for the cheerfulness that almost every man has, and that remains his most valuable asset.

Another fact induces cheerfulness—that we are doing something for England, and that we may say with Rupert Brooke, "Now, God be thanked, Who has matched us with his hour." But the main reason, after the glamour of the first few weeks has gone, lies in the reduction of the war to a personal equation, with the resultant fact that the odds are tremendously in one's favor.—London Mail.

For instance, Hood's Sarsaparilla, the standard blood purifier, is recommended for conditions that are scrofulous or dependent on impure blood.

Peptiron Pills, the new iron tonic, are especially recommended for conditions that are anemic and nervous.

Many persons suffer from a combination of these conditions. They are afflicted with swellings of the glands, bunches in the neck, eruptions, and sores on the body, limbs and face, and are besides pale and nervous.

If these patients take both Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills they are reasonably sure to derive fourfold benefit. These two great medicines supplement each other, and the use of both, even in cases where only one may appear to be indicated, is of great advantage. Get them from your druggist.

HARKING BACK TO MUCK.

Probably farmers who have reached middle age or more, need not be told about the muck pile. The writer remembers very distinctly how on his father's farm, which had a disposition to be slightly sandy in some portions, muck was one of the regular features of the farm operations. The farm had two or three muck holes in which the humus was as black and rich as it is possible to imagine. And this humus was taken out, carted to the place behind the barn reserved for mixing the muck heap, and there it was piled. Usually it was done in the fall, but sometimes it was started early in spring.

Various methods were adopted in mixing it. Often the wagon went to the woods, and leaves were raked up and mixed with it. Again, the sweepings from the barnyard were made a part of the pile. Waste from the vegetable cellar, corn cobs, if the corn was shelled with a machine, and numerous other fertilizing materials were mixed with the muck as it came from the hole. The henhouse and the privy vault contributed.

Then came the hard back-aching work of forking it over. Time and again the muck heap had to be forked back and forth to keep its ingredients thoroughly mixed and see that they rotted as they should. When it was impossible to do anything else, the muck heap came in for a forking, and no matter how nearly all other work might be up to the minute, the muck pile was always behind and had to be forked again to be sure that it was mixing properly.

But it made a fertilizer at a moderate cost which could scarcely be equalled. When a quantity was dropped in a hill for either corn or potatoes, the effect was Commercial fertilizers supply the materisimilar to what phosphate did later. al which plants require. So did the muck heap, and the most expensive and most carefully analyzed fertilizers of the present day do no more.

Humus is necessary for the slighly light and sandy soil. Whithout it, plants lead but a precarious existence. Sometimes lime is mixed with the muck, but not always, nor is it always necessary. Much depends upon the soil dug from the swamp. If it is rich in nitrates, lime is scarcely needed. If it is lacking, then it will be necessary to mix a little lime with it.

In these days of scientific research, students are searching for cheap sources of nitrogen. Muck soil contains plenty of nitrogen, but it is in such a condition that plants cannot make use of it. All over the world, manufacturers and others are searching for some means to release this nitrogen and make it available for plants.

In one case, pots containing coke are placed in the pile, and through iron electrodes electricity is passed, thus taking the nitrates from the muck. In other cases, the muck is dried and limed and then inoculated with bacteria which are said to bring nitrogen from the air. Nitrates obtained in this way are so expensive that only those who are equipped to make the most of what they do obtain can afford it. They cost far more than the market price for nitrogen, and after all, what is the use of paying more than the market price?

Electricity and bacteria may in time give the farmer cheap nitrogen, but they haven't done so yet, and thus far the compost, or muck heap is better. Besides it doesn't cost so much into three-fourths.

Lime in the pile is the practical substitute for electricity, and muscle applied to the fork handle is the substitute for bacteria. Study all the new things about humus you can find, but when it comes down to the real practical end of pin your faith to the muck heap and act accordingly.

It is a very homely method of providing the humus needed to nericy the soil that needs nitrogen, but it is effective and relatively inexpensive. Remembering this, one may forgive it for the lack of scientific approval. The results are what the farmer wants. He shouldn't care particularly what the type of fertilizer is if it accomplishes the purpose for which it is intended. And the muck pile does that, and more. It helps this year's crop and it enriches the soil by building up some of the humus which it lacks, evenutally transforming it into fertile acres which require less care than when the work begins. So much for the inexpensive muck heap. It is worth trying. The land will respond liberally to such treatment for the lack of humus.

Newspaper Advertising is the most efficient salesman you can employ. You must let the public know what you have and where to buy if you want to sell, and similarly you cannot sell your goods without publicity. Newspapers reach the majority of prospective customers at a comparatively small cost, it goes into the homes and the public seeing your advertisement will become interested. If the goods are right they will buy. Sales mean Profits.

CARE OF PLANTS.

If palms and ferns are kept in the rooms of a house, a great deal of their beauty depends on constant attention, for unless they have regular care they look scraggy and sickly.

To tell if a plant needs water give a sharp tap to the pot in which it is growing. If this sounds hollow, water is needed. If on the contrary, a dull sound is the response, the soil has plenty of moisture.

Always see that the water runs through the earth, running through the hole in the bottom of the pot; the water before being used should be warmed to about the temperature of the room in which the plant stands—especially this should be done in the winter. Once a week the surface of the leaves should be dusted and then sponged. Gloves should be worn when sponging the leaves, as contact with the hand turns the edges yellow.

If you look at the root of almost any plant you will notice that the rising stem has the leaves attached to it in an odd way, reminding you of a bulb. This part of the palm supplies it with nutriment, and should be covered with only a very thin covering of soil.

Plants should not have water poured over the leaves unless they are wiped dry at once, as each drop of water allowed to stand on the leaf causes it to turn yellow. When a room is swept, if the plants are not carried out of it they should always be covered, as the dust will settle on the leaves and clog the pores.

MATTY BALDWIN'S SERMON.

Here is a homely sermon in simple language and imperfect phraseology. It is by one who knows of the rocks which he has charted. Matty Baldwin, the boxer, preached this Billy Sunday jolt to students in Boys Trade School recently:

"It's a different crowd here than I'm used to," said Baldwin in opening his talk. I'm used to a crowd all right, been used to it for 14 years, but I'm used to seeing the ropes and the smoke and hearing the crowd yell, 'Bring them out!' It is good to look into the faces of a crowd like this though—a crowd of clean young fellows like you.

"Now about this discipline game that your director has been talking to you about—there is nothing like it. You've got to practice it every day, no matter what line it is you are in. It is discipline all the time. You hear a little in the papers now and then these days about the German Army and the thing they are doing. They are doing those things because of the discipline they've practiced.

"You are all talking about that Willard-Moran fight the other night. Perhaps you say like lots of others, 'Look at Willard getting $40,000 for about 40 minutes' work.' You say, 'Gee, I'd let a man kill me for that!' But do you know what Willard and Moran had to do to get where they can go out and get $40,000 and $20,000, or whatever it is? It is that little old discipline again."

Baldwin then explained to the boys the daily grind of a man who is training for a fight and said, "I don't want to give you any ambitions for the fight or the boxing game. If I had a dog I thought anything of I'd want to keep him away from the fighting game. There isn't enough in it, and it's a rocky road. Fighting is born in a man, and unless it is he can't get to the top notchers. Training can teach to box, but to get to the big game it must be born in a man."

Baldwin told of how, at the request of his mother, he took the pugilistic ambition out of a younger brother, saying "I had a brother who wanted to be a fighter, and my mother said she was worried. I discouraged him. It took me just about a minute. I discouraged him by beating him and when I was through discouraging him, he lay under a table in the house and he didn't want to box any more and has not since.

"Keep your bodies in good shape. You've got to if you want to get anywhere in any line. Leave the cigarettes and the beer and all kinds of booze alone. They don't get you anything and they'll get you in time. You may think it smart to stand on the corner with your hat on one side smoking a cigarette, or you may think it smart to take the booze, but it gets you talked about and hurts your reputation, and in the end it puts you down and out. I've known lots of boys, fine young boys, during the 14 years I've been in the fight game, who have gone down and out because they started wrong and went wrong. Keep yourselves clean and healthy, boys, and you'll be ready to succeed in whatever line of the game you take up."

Plan the Work Room First.

The family who are contemplating building a house generally consider everything before they plan the kitchen. Yet no man would think of planning his store or factory without due consideration to the workroom. It should be remembered that the charms of the living room and the dining room ought not to divert attention from the factory end of the home where the business of the family is transacted. This consideration is as important for the woman who expects to employ help in her housework as for the woman who will do her own work for a complaint from the cook is as legitimate as a complaint from the business manager.

The sink should be the right height so that dish washing will not be a back breaking task. There should be carefully considered arrangement of closets and cupboards for making the work easier and the cooking utensils and ingredients ought to be within easy reach of the cook. The relative positions of the sink, the stove, the cupboards and the kitchen cabinet should be carefully considered and the lighting and ventilation of the kitchen and pantry ought to come in for a good share of consideration.

There is a good deal of joking at the expense of efficiency, but if housekeepers were more ready to apply it wisely to their work there would be fewer discontented with their business. The kitchen of the house, whatever its scale is to be, should have the careful consideration of the architect, the housekeeper and the family and if necessary, the advice of previous home builders in the effort to arrive at the maximum of convenience.

WHAT BIRDS EAT.

Even the crow, traditionally regarded as the farmer's foe, does more good than harm, says a department of agriculture bulletin, because he east mice, cut worms, white grubs and great quantities of other destructive insects.

Hawks may carry away an occasional chicken, but if you make a post mortem examination of a hawk you may find as many as 100 grasshoppers in his crop, representing one course of a single meal.

As for owls, any farmer tempted to shoot one and nail its hide to the barn door should consider this fact: In the home of a single pair of barn owls there have been found 3,000 skulls, nearly all of them relics of field mice, house mice and rats.

For most of the wild birds a still clearer case can be found out. Investigators have found in a tree swallow's stomach 40 whole chinch bugs and specimens of ten other kinds of insects. A Texas bank swallow was found to have eaten 68 cotton boll wevils and 35 cliff swallows had collected an average of 18 boll wevils each. In the stomach of a Texas killdeer were found 300 mosquito larvae. A Kentucky nighthawk or bullbat had devoured 34 May beetles. A New York nighthawk had dined on 24 cloverleaf weevils and 375 ants, and another was found busy digesting 340 grasshoppers, 52 bugs, three beetles, two wasps and a spider. Such data might be multiplied ad infinitum.

It is a fact, which cannot be too often repeated, that we have misjudged the wild birds of the woods and fields. They are not injurious, but beneficent. They are the friends of the farmer, and therefore of mankind. They keep down the insect pests which already cause $700,000,000 loss a year, and which if allowed to multiply without such a natural check would destroy our entire food supply. Entirely aside from sentimental considerations, we'd better stop killing the birds and give them more protection.

ROAD MAINTENANCE.

Paul D. Sargent, chief engineer of Maine State highway commission says:

During 1915 we maintained 777 miles of State aid roads. These were distributed among substantially five hundred townships. This work was done through the local road forces, after our representative had looks the road over with the local officials in charge of ordinary road work, and laid out what should be done. The most of this mileage was gravel surfaced, less than 25 miles of it being macadam. The maintenance work being consisted of ordinary repairs such as dragging the surface, raking rocks, cleaning ditches and culverts, trimming shoulders, mending guard rails and repairing culvert end walls. More or less new gravel surface was applied. The average cost of doing this work was $130 per mile. The method is not satisfactory, as local officials are not responsive enough to the directions of the state highway commission.

We had under maintenance during the season of 1915, 195.5 miles of state highway. Included in this mileage was about ten mile of Portland cement concrete and 15 miles of bituminous macadam; the balance being gravel surface.

The Portland cement concrete was all built two or more years ago and was surface-treated immediately after construction with tar and sand. This concrete is all either 10 or 12 feet wide with macadam shoulders to make up a total width of 21 feet. Traffic over these sections of road is very heavy for about five months in the summer; running from 3,000 to 3,500 automobiles per day. This means pretty nearly a steady double stream of traffic. The principal expense on this road is in maintaining the shoulders, particularly at the curves. A little patching of the tar surfacing had been done, but this was a very slight expense.

The bituminous macadam sections are 16 feet wide with gravel shoulders. These sections, which are two or three years old, received a very slight surface treatment of tar in the early spring; as little of one-sixth of a gallon being used and the tar being sprayed only where the surface showed signs of weakness.

Between the sections above mentioned are some sections of gravel-surfaced road which carry the traffic mentioned above. This gravel-surfaced road was surface-treated with Travia-B about May 20th, using about one-third of a gallon per square yeard and then covering with sand. The same gravel sections had been treated twice in the same way the season before, once about the second treatment about the first of August, using for the two treatments about 0.6 of a gallon of tar per square yard. All of the above sections were patrolled through the entire season, between six and seven months for the purpose of patching the surface and trimming shoulders, cleaning gutters etc.

The average expense of maintaining all of the above sections, including surface treatment and patrol maintenance, was $456 per mile.

The balance of the mileage of state highways, amount to about 170 miles, were maintained as plain gravel-surfaced roads by patrolmen. Some of the mileage was not taken for maintenance until about July first, when it was completed by the contractors; although the most of it was under maintenance for the entire season. The average expense of maintaining these by patrol method was $77 per mile. These were all new roads, completed the fall before or during the early part of 1915. It is probable that the traffic averaged 450 automobiles per day and fifty horse-drawn vehicles of all kinds. It is estimated that a full season's maintenance by the patrol method will average to cost $100 per mile.

Where sections were surface-treated they were swept and prepared for the treatment by the patrolman with a horse broom. The tar was applied from a motor truck distributor by the parties from whom the material was purchased, at a cost of nine cents per gallon, applied. The tar was applied to one-half the road at a time and after a few hours it was covered with a very light coat of sand; the next day or day after, the other half of the road was treated. The state does not own any maintenance equipment.

Patrolmen furnish their own teams and equipment and are paid $75 per month.

BLUE FLANNEL BAGS.

Did you ever notice that the silver you stow carefully away in neat white canton flannel bags, presumably to keep it from tarnishing, is blacker and more stained with tarnish when you go to get it out of its bag than the silver that has been in use all the time? And did you ever notice, if the silver is kept in a long case that it is wound about itself, that the silver best protected, nearest the middle, is most tarnished.

A jeweler says that the reason for this is that white canton flannel is bleached with a mixture containing sulphur, which spots and tarnishes silver very quickly. So when your extra dozen silver forks are carefully packed away in their white canton flannel case, of course those in the middle, farthest from the air, become the most tarnished.

It is for this reason that silver-smiths almost always use blue canton flannel bags and cases for their silver, not, as many persons think, because blue is more beautiful than white. No sulpher is used in the preparation of blue flannel and so none lingers in its folds after it is made up into bags and cases for silver.

New Sleeping-Car Berths Have Room for Dressing.

The embarrassing inconveniences commonly experienced in a sleeping car are done away with in a recently patented sleeper, described in the June Popular Mechanics Magazine. The car provides all berths with room in which the passenger may stand upright while dressing or undressing. The portion of the mattress and spring under each pillow is made separate from the rest and so hinged to the end of the berth that it can be turned up out of the way.

In the lower berth this leaves a space at the head of the bed which the passenger can enter by opening the hinged end of the seat; here he can disrobe while standing upright and hang his clothes, full length, at the end of the hinged section which does not extend quite to the side of the car. When undressed he gets into bed and then turns down the hinged section and puts the pillow in place.

The upper berth is arranged similarly, the head being at the opposite end. Over the foot of the lower berth hangs a narrow platform, inclosed except at the aisle end, to which the upper-berth passenger easily mounts by opening the hinged end of the seat and using a step supplied by the porter.

NORWAY AND VICINITY.

HARKEN BACK ON THE PAST

Twenty-six Years Ago This Week.

Agnes Baker, the oldest daughter of John N. Baker of this village, died in Colorado, Sunday. She went West last June for her health.

V. W. Hills has a new bicycle and this week he has devoted his spare time taming the fiery steed. He took it off of Main street to the large and roomy space back of Norway Block in either direction. Here with the aid of dry goods boxes and one or two assistants, he has made it very entertaining for the lookers-on. Wednesday morning we noticed he took the wheel out on the more retired streets and in a few days we shall expect to see him spinning through our main thoroughfares.

East Waterford item:—E. C. Hilton has moved from Lewiston to stay with his father, Edward Hilton, this summer, whose health is very poor.

Twenty-five Years Ago This Week.

June Leavitt with her tricycle is envied by all the children.

Otis Jones and family have arrived here from Boston for the season.

Prof. H. M. Small went to Greenwood and caught 80 trout.

David Frost has completed the foundations for Dr. G. W. Hazelton's buildings on the Hathaway farm.

Elm House Hall has been changed into sleeping rooms.

All Knights Templars in this locality have been invited to be present at Masons Hall, Norway, Me., Friday, May 26th. Oriental Commandery, No. 22, Knights Templars of Bridgton will work the order of the Red Cross on seven candidates.

Mercy Millett is at her brother's, Robert Millett's, at Springfield, Vt., for a week, called there by the illness of her nephew, Donald Millett, who has been suffering some time with a rheumatic trouble. After the death of Donald's mother, soon after his birth, Mercy cared for him till five years old, naturally they are much attached. We hear Donald is improving.

C. B. Caswell of Buckfield was in Norway, Tuesday, looking for a job as chauffeur for the summer.

N. D. Merrill in returning from a trip to Lewiston, Sunday in his auto, met with an accident and over turned the machine. His wife, who was with him, received slight injuries; also the machine. They returned in the auto to Norway.

Fenders have been put on the electric cars. They look substantial and give one a feeling of security.

The Norway Auto Co. are reaping the benefits of their Oakland Opening day. Those riding in Oaklands are: Phon Charles, North Waterford, Dr. E. L. Brown, Bethel, Will Crosby, Bridgton, Dr. Farris, Oxford, Stanley Pratt, Oxford, John Shepard, Norway, Mell Bartlett, East Stoneham. Geo. Dunn of Norway has also purchased a Dodge Bros. car of the same company. Who will be next?

This is officially the week for the low shoe and the straw hat.

The "set the clock ahead one hour" is a grand scheme. It is being tried out on British territory till September 30th. We remember a woman, a mill hand living in Laconia, N. H., worked the same idea a quarter of a century or more ago. She was a woman ahead of her time.

A. T. Bennett and Clem Goodwin are making piazza improvement on their homes.

Hobbs Pond Dam Gave Way.

The village of Norway was kept guessing for about twelve hours, Thursday, over the water situation in the lake.

The lake was brim full of water from the recent rains and between one and two, Thursday afternoon, the eight foot dam at the out-let of Hobbs Pond went out with the extra pressure of water and over six feet of water from Hobbs Pond came tearing into Lake Pennesseewassee. As soon as it was learned that their was trouble at the Pond, E. S. Cummings made a hasty trip to the pond in his auto and learning the situation, returned to the upper mill and had the sluice opened which allowed a volume of water to pass off. After a few hours it was found the out-let was as great as the amount coming in, so no immediate danger followed. To prevent the water from passing around the dam sand bags were placed from the dam to the boat house road in case the water did rise and on the other side of the mill the same precaution was taken.

So strong was the force of the water that it slightly undermined the corner of the upper bridge. At the lower bridge watch was kept to prevent any obstruction under the bridge to make the water back up. Men were kept at work at the bridges and at the dam all night and Friday forenoon. The Oxfort Electric Light Co. put up a string of lights from road to road over the dam to aid in keeping watch. The water was kept at about the same level from the first. Crowds of people visited the dam during the afternoon and evening and the upper part of the village was a lively spot.

On top of this came another scare, Friday. It was rumored that the dam at North Pond was in a weakened condition and was liable to go out at any time. Men went to the dam and made repairs and it was put in safe condition.

C. B. Cummings & Sons Co. were put to the most inconvenience and trouble. The water rose so high in the meadow that it flooded the dowel yard and it was necessary to put a boom around the yard to retain the logs piled there. The water came into the dowel mill and engine room so the fires were put out for a time.

The mill pond remained a rushing torrent until Saturday morning, when the water began to subside and the sluice could be closed.

Memorial Day Observance.

In the 7th inning Brooks was about the whole show, throwing out one at first and getting two others on foul flies. Hosmer, Evirs and Descoteau made good plays for Norway while the work of Dumais in the outfield and the hitting of H. Prosser stood out in Lisbon Falls team. Score by innings:

The Wonderful Life.

The story of the Saviour is imperishable in its helpfulness to humanity. In whatever form presented this power remains. The usual method of bringing this great life to the public is through the sermon, but modern science has made it possible to present Jesus to the eye through the photograph and moving picture machine. "From the Manger to the Cross," photographed in five reels amid the scenes of the Holy Land where the Messiah lived, will be given at the South Paris Universalist church, Memorial Sunday evening, May 28, at 7 o'clock. Fifty thousand dollars was expended in obtaining this great drama in film form, a drama absolutely unlike the Passion Play, because taken on the actual ground where Christianity was born. ## IS LIFE WORTH LIVING?

How often we hear the question asked is life worth living? Does one get enough out of it to pay for the struggle? Do the pleasures, comforts and enjoyments offset the griefs, sorrows and disappointments met on the journey that has but one end? The answer rests on the individual—his aims and ambitions, his view of life and his own particular conception of what is pleasure and what constitutes success.

If measured in a material, worldly way by the accumulation of riches, or by personal achievement or emoluments, with egotistical motives, and without the altruistic interest in the happiness of others, one readily understands how in the rebuffs met in the world of disappointments there might be raised the question as to the worth of it all.

The ways of Dame Fortune are peculiar and oftentimes she is blamed for the vagaries of her unnatural daughter, Miss Fortune.

One ought not expeit to always be on the sunny side of life's problems. Each must share in the dark discouragements and tribulations and do it manfully and cheerfully, lighting up the gloom of despair with reflected brightness from within the contented soul. Burdens and losses will fall to the lot of all, as will the blessings and joys.

Have we drifted away from the primary foundation on which rests the whole fabric civilization? In the hustle and bustle of business life, with its drive, drive, drive, with millions changing hands each hour of every day, and each clamoring wild-eyed for the mighty dollar, there is an appalling future to reflect on how the other fellow is faring or that the sun in which one basks may be casting dark and distressing shadows on many.

No statement is extreme in this day when fortunes are made and lost over night, people raised from the depths of poverty to affluence; some who have built for years, brought down to humiliation as their structure is swept from under them; thousands swept into the market only to be engulfed in the whirlpool of disaster, many driven to desperation and death by the crushing juggernaut of modern business; others driven to dishonesty—not to satisfy a real need but merely to get, and getting, seek for more.

To-day the dollar is the standard of high rank and the password of recognition in the world of business. Instead of asking "What has he done for the world?" the query is, "How much is he worth?" Judging with eyes bandaged must estimate his value by the shekels he brings.

The spirit of the times has changed. To-day Bunker Hill would go undefended, for in the grind of the money mill there would be no time for such a break; to close the shop and carry a musket would mean a lost opportunity to add to the hoard in the strong box, in the eyes of many to-day. Not so in times of the past—there, as at Yorktown and Valley Forge, at Spottsylvania, Cedar Creek and Gettysburg—there was patriotism, loyalty and love of country, that called louder than the clink of gold, and an exhibition of the kind of brotherhood that makes life seem worth while and instills joy into every heart. Let us get nearer together, and blot out the jealous hatreds and avarice that breed unhealthy thoughts in our souls. Lets be glad over the success which meets others and try to brighten rather than readen the joy which comes to him—let us look at the world's fragrance and beauty, with its pleasures and opportunities for real success, and see if it does not bring happiness to all of us. That is what He would have done, what He did do when He made the Supreme Sacrifice on Calvary and made life worth living for us.

"PUSH"

"Push" is the process of getting ahead, if necessry, over the feet and faces of the crowd in front.

This country is the home of "push." Owing to the constant endeavor of the rear rank to become leaders, a man does not sit down contented in a good job in the United States for two reasons. First, because he hopes to push the fellow ahead of him out of his place, and second, because the fellow behind him is pushing on him day and night.

"Push" consists of getting down to business early and taking it home with you at night; of selling a steam thresher to the man who came in for a half inch nut and washer; of doing business on the sidewalk, while one's store is burning up across the street; of getting the other fellow's trade away from him without using a club, unless absolutely necessary; of advertising until men go on Arctic expeditions to get away from your trademark; in short of grabbing Opportunity a mile down the street, hauling him in by the heels and making a door boy of him.

About a hundred years ago the United States had less than 8,000,000 people, a lot of debts, a war about ready to hatch, and a few men of "push." They kept pushing until the country had to enlarge five times to take care of its business. In the last 20 years, Americans have pushed harder than ever, until this nation is now the wealthiest on the globe, and all over the world foreigners are rubbing sore spots and commenting bitterly upon American "push."

"Push" is what dug the Panama canal and built ready-made cities of 100,000 people, such as Gary, Indiana. "Push" got the New York skyscraper up over 800 feet and filled Detroit so full of automobile factories that it takes all the air in one ward each day to pump all the tires of the new machines. But "push" has also filled the federal prisons full of bankers, who tried to make a few yards through the law, and "push" has made public officials out of a great many men whose only qualification was their ability to get up early in the morning and collect votes when the sheriff wasn't looking.

"Push" has made this a mighty country and a very uncomfortable one. With the meat men, the wheat men, the shoe men and the oil men all trying to become instantaneous millionares by means of "push," the average citizen is full of bruises where he has been "pushed." "Push" is a good motto, but "Quit your shoving" isn't so bad, either.

UNWIRED HOUSES EASILY EQUIPPED.

Concealed Wiring Easily and Quickly Installed Without Damage to the House.

New houses, where there is electric service, are generally wired for electric lighes when in course of construction. But, there are ever and ever so many houses built long before electric lights were possible. A great many householders labor under the mistaken idea that electrical conveniences in the home are not for them because their homes were built before the electric lighting plant was installed in their city, or village.

This is a very common error, and nothing could be further from the truth. Any house, regardless of the materials used in its construction, from the bamboo cot of the Philipino to the huge stone castles of the early English, can be equipped for electricity. The task is very simple, the cost but little, and the house, walls, floors or ceilings, need not be marred. The process, in brief, is about as follows:

The rugs are rolled back, one strip of flooring is taken up and the wires are laid on the beams.

Small holes are cut in the sidewall for switches, in the ceiling for the wires that connect to the fixtures and in the baseboards for "outlets."

The wires that connect with the switches, baseboard outlets and the different floors are "fished" between the walls. When the job is completed all the wires are hidden between the walls and under the floors.

The switches cover the holes in the sidewalls and the fixtures hide the outlets in the ceiling.

No one would ever suspect that the wiring had not been done at the time the house was built.

There is no discomfort or annoyance to the family.

By an ingenious method the wires are run between the walls of houses and in and out under the floors, which makes the actual cutting of the walls entirely unnecessary. The wires are usually introduced by way of the cellar, but sometimes they come through the attic, or from a back porch. Possibly the electrician may take up a floor board at the side of the attic and lower a thin steel tape, called a "snake," by which a clear drop is found. Finally the "snake" reaches the cellar, the helper attaches the electric wires, and by this means the wires are hauled up. In exactly the same way, other wires are placed in position by being let down the side walls, or under the garret flooring to catch all the little holes made in the plaster where the second floor lights are to be located. Ways have been found by the eletrician to introduce their wires between floor beams and floor studs. It seems sometimes, as if the builders of old dwellings must have had a premonition that electricity was coming. They certainly have made it easy for the experts to introduce their wires in such a way as not to mar the walls, or woodwork, and not to require extensive preparatory labor.

In houses where there are hardwood floors, and particularly on the lower floor, the electrician finds more serious difficulties in putting in his wire. But here, too, the "snake" is his efficient tool. It is often introduced by taking up a board in a closet above where the light is to be placed, and thus the trick is easily done. If there is no closet in line with the point to be reached by the electric light outlet, as sometimes happens, or if the floor beams block the way, a section of baseboard is lifted out and the line is run from that point. Thus the electricians steadily progress with their work. They never find an insurmountable obstacle in the work of wiring. No matter how ancient a dwelling may be, they can get it ready for electric lights and for the attachment of the various labor saving devices. They pull through the wires encased in a protective conduit, until the job is done. No holes are made in the wall, or ceiling, which are not covered by some fixture, or canopy, or switch plate; every piece of floor which has been taken up is quickly replaced, the little sawdust made is swept up, and the small pieces of plaster which may be knocked off are caught as they fall. The process of wiring makes no noise, the furniture is not disturbed and no material has been brought into the house except a few coils of wire and some paper bags and boxes of porcelain and brass fittings.

Once the house is wired, if the householder wants to visit the cellar he can turn on the electric light when he opens the cellar door. He doesn't have to grope along a pair of dark stairs and then paw around the cellar for a match or a place to scratch it. He simply turns a switch and the subterranean lurking place of coal and kindling wood is all aglow. He leaves the cellar lighted and does not have to extinguish the light until he gets upstairs. When there are callers, indicated by the door-bell, a switch can be turned and the porch bathed in a soft, bright light. Every room in the house can be lighted at the same time or one at a time. These and many other advantages follow in line with the wiring of a house.

When the householder is ambitious and aspires to washing, ironing, cooking, sweeping and sewing attachments, much more wiring has to be done than for ordinary lighting. The attachments for these various conveniences have been made extremely simple and experts have located the points for the attachments where the conveniences of the householder can be best served.

EAST PARIS.

It is a busy time with the farmers. So it is with the tent caterpillars. The wise orchardist will destroy them.

Our Road Commissioners and District Surveyors have been repairing the roads ever since the flood. They have done some good work but have not finished.

The high winds that blew for several days before the rain blew down old decaying trees, ripped boards off from old barns and out-houses and tore Paroid roofing from others not so old.

One of our neighbors here put a yearling colt to pasture two miles away, the day before the heavy rain. The colt had no company except a pair of yearling steers that were put in before. He threw a top pole off the wall and jumped out and went home the next morning, in the rain, wet to the skin.

A man who lives less than a hundred miles from here received a small package by mail a few days ago that was done up quite strongly. He said it was all stuck together with "this d—d ensilage." Perhaps that would be an improvement on the mucilage that is put on some of our postage stamps.

A Good Cook Knows Her Fuel

DO you realize that your oil cook-stove acts very differently with different grades of kerosene?

If you want the clearest, hottest flame with complete freedom from smoke and odor, you should be careful about what goes into the reservoir of your oil stove.

All Kerosene is not alike by any means. And the good kind is enough better to be decidedly worth asking for.

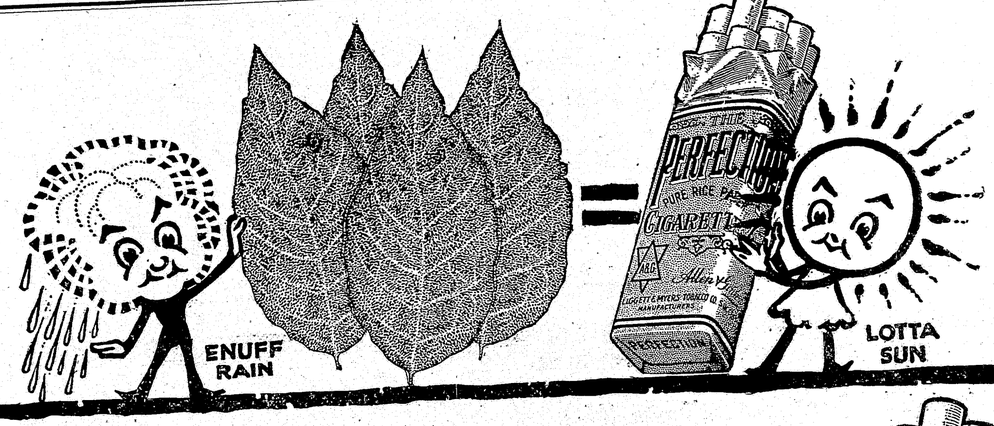

Say "Socony" (So-CO-ny) to the grocer's boy when he comes to take your oil can. In that way you can be sure of getting reliable fuel—Socony Kerosene Oil, which is the Standard Oil Company of New York's best kerosene.

Socony Kerosene is absolutely clean and clear-burning whenever and wherever you buy it. It does not make wick crust—you do not need to clean the burners so often and you get a bigger money's worth of heat.

Look for the Socony sign in the windows of groceries, hardware and general stores everywhere which carry Socony Kerosene Oil. It is the sign of quality and a reliable dealer.

We recommend the following oil burning devices as the best of their kind: New Perfection Oil Cook-stoves and Water Heaters, Perfection Smokeless Oil Heaters, Rayo Lamps and Lanterns.

WATERFORD

Summer Visitor Honored.

New York papers state that the three official boards of Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian church, Brooklyn, gave a banquet on Monday evening, in honor of John Hyatt Brewer, who has just completed 35 years of service as organist and choir director. This is a surprise to Waterford people who knew Mr. Brewer well from his long-time habit of spending a summer vacation here. He has withstood the vicissitudes of choir life remarkably well and few would imagine that he has passed his 60th milestone, yet such is the case.

The church is one of the largest in greater New York and Apollo Club Hall, said to be the largest banquet hall in Brooklyn, was packed. After-dinner speeches were made by persons notable in church and musical life, and, of course, by Mr. Brewer.

The anniversary was observed at the church on Sunday evening, when the service was largely musical. There were appropriate addresses by the present pastor, Rev. Charles Carroll Albertson, and by Rev. Dr. David Gregg, who was pastor from 1890 to 1894.

In the 35 years of his service as choirmaster, Mr. Brewer has constantly directed a large chorus; also special monthly musical services have been maintained since 1883. At these services, some 375 in all, many noted works have been given. In that time, the choir has had as soloists, nine sopranos, three altos, ten tenors and nine bassos.

Mr. Brewer is also renowned as the composer of more than 150 pieces of sacred and other music, and it is asserted that none of them is in ragtime. Many of them were prepared during his vacations in Waterford, and some of them were first heard publicly at wonderful concerts which he has given in this little village.

HARRISON.

Visited the District Meeting.

Seven automobile loads of light hearted members of Woodland Rebekah Lodge left Harrison village at one o'clock, Saturday afternoon, May 20th to attend the district meeting of Rebekahs, which met this year with Crystal Valley Lodge in North Lovell. On arriving at the hall, we were heartily greeted by different members of the lodge and ushered into the Main hall, where we met members from several other lodges. The meeting in the afternoon was most beneficial to all. Mrs. Martin, the Vice Grand of the Assembly, was present and in a most pleasing manner answered all the perplexing questions that were asked. At the close of the afternoon session a bountiful supper, prepared by Crystal Valley Lodge, was heartily partaken of and enjoyed by all.

Supper over the visitors went strolling to view the beautiful scenery that Lovell affords, returning in time for the evening session.

The degree team of Woodland Rebakah Lodge exemplified the work in a creditable manner, the district deputy president and vice grand of the Rebekah Assembly praised the work very highly, remarking that it was nearly letter perfect and was without criticism, much to the pleasure of the degree staff.

At the close of the session ice cream and cake were served in the banquet hall, and when good night had been said they returned to their several homes feeling that they had passed a pleasant and profitable session with the North Lovell lodge.

Practical Economy

Baking powders made from alum or phosphate may be bought for a trifle less than Royal Baking Powder, which is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes.

Alum powders are not only cheap, but they differ greatly in leavening power.

If a cheap baking powder is used for a fine cake and the cake turns out a failure there is a waste of costly materials worth more than a whole can of the cheap baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder produces the finest food, and its use therefore, results in an actual saving.

DOCK LAMBS.

The lambs that have not already been docked should be attended to at once. If docking is delayed much longer, flies will give trouble by laying eggs close to the wounds. The maggots that hatch from these eggs feed in or near the wound and prevent it from healing.

Is docking necessary? Not absolutely, but it is advisable because (1) docked lambs present a more attractive appearance than those with long tails, (2) they bring from 25 to 50 cents more per 100 pounds when marketed, and (3) in case of scours when the flock is turned on the grass, filth will often collect on the tails of the lambs, presenting an ideal place for maggots to live.

Strong, healthy lambs can be docked most easily when from two days to three weeks old by cutting the tails off about an inch from the body with a good sharp knife. Older lambs will frequently bleed badly if docked with a knife or hatchet. Hot irons are used in order to prevent the loss of blood, which in some cases will be so great as to weaken the lambs and cut down their gain for a week or more. The regular docking iron which can be purchased from any sheep supply house at $1.25 to $1.50, is recommended, but a hot chisel, no doubt, would be just as successful.

The purpose of the use of the hot iron is to prevent bleeding by thoroughly searing the ends of the blood vessels. The irons should be heated until they are cherry red. If they are too cold, the blood vessels will not be seared thoroughly, or if they are too hot, the tails will be taken off too quickly and some bleeding will frequently occur. An ordinary tinsmith's blow-torch is one of the most convenient means of heating the irons, but a portable forge may be used.

Ram lambs that are not to be kept for breeding purposes should be castrated at docking time. This is not necessary in case of lambs that are to be sold for mutton at the age of three or four months. However, spring lambs that are not marketed until fall are always castrated because they are easier to manage and fatten than ram lambs. This operation should always be performed before flies become troublesome.

LOVE OF HEALTH

It Leads to an Increased Efficiency and a Fuller Achievement of Things Worth While.

If any one doubts that this is an era of health propaganda he must, indeed, be oblivious of what is going on about him. Municipal, State and National agencies are using forces and funds at their disposal to further the interests of public hygiene. Educational influences are directing their energies to the spread of the lessons of procurable health in public print and in documents of both official and unofficial character. Novels and short stories, the literature of biography and travel, the platform and even the pulpit are proclaiming the gospel of health far and wide.

The medical profession, more enthusiastic if not more vitally interested than any other group in the promotion and outcome of the modern hygiene movement, may well stop from time to time and inquire about the sanity of the methods of the propaganda. The religious doctrine of past ages involved the threat of harm; it inculcated a fear of the destruction of danger that was sure to follow the violation of the law. This dismal attitude has long since been replaced by a religion of love, of uplift and joyous anticipation.

In the health propaganda, likewise, much of the pessimistic attitude, unconsciously perhaps, has been introduced in the past. The fear of disease has been held over the heads of the people.

Rarely have we seen the more appropriate spirit of the modern "better health" movement better expressed than in a pamphlet of the Life Extension Institute. "It is not a fear of illness or of death that we should encourage, but a love of health, a sense of responsibility for the care of our bodies, a desire for bodily endurance and efficiency and full achievement. If the mind is fixed on these ideals, and the already known means of approaching them are utilized, the needless miseries that embitter the lives of so many may be left to take care of themselves. It is not so much necessary to fight disease as to cultivate health for the happiness, contentment and moral gain that it brings."

There is something unusually optimistic and buoyant in such words. They embody the psychologic cue to comfort and happiness for many a patient, without implying that "man is incapable of sin, sickness and death," or that "health is not a condition of matter, but of mind." To inspire a love of health does not mean to exclude the great body of scientific knowledge which is the best that science can offer today regarding disease, or to replace medicine by crude metaphysics. The ardent love of health insures a mind receptive to the lessons of modern medicine.

SPITTING OF BLOOD

When a person spits blood it is very important that he know from where it comes. It may have come into his mouth from his nose. If there is a salty taste in the mouth, a slight tickling in the throat, and then the appearance of bright red blood or sputum streaked with blood the probability is that the color has come from the lung.

In many cases the amount of blood is small. In some cases each cough brings up a mouthful. When blood comes from the lungs the probability is that consumption is the cause. The sputum should be examined for tubercle bacilli. One examination is not enough. It is not easy for the bacteriologist to find bacilli in bloddy sputum. Probably the reason is that the sputum is so much diluted with blood that the number of bacilli in a drop of mixture is not large. Consumption cannot be excluded until several examinations made after the blood has disappeared from the sputum shows no bacilli present, no other evidence of the disease is present, or another cause for the hemorrhage has been found.

Some cases of consumption begin with hemorrhage from the lungs. At least hemorrhage is the first symtom which makes the patient seek a physician. In other cases hemorrhage does not appear until cavities have formed.

Not every case of hemorrhage from the lungs is due to consumption.

In some forms of heart disease blood vessels of the lungs are over-filled with blood. If the sputum is carefully examined proof of minute hemorrhages can be found most any time. Every now and then there will be a frank hemorrhage, followed by spitting of blood.

In old cases of gout with chronic bronchitis there is a tendency to hemorrhage into the lungs. Every now and then these cases spit blood. It is of no consequence.

The important point is that one must make sure that these are not cases of consumption.

What is to be done for spitting of blood? The patient must lie down flat. He must be quiet, both mentally and physically. If he has any way of judging from which side his hemorrhage is coming, he should lie on that side. Eating ice, partaking freely of iced drinks are advised. An ice pack to the throat or over the lung does some good. As soon as the physician comes he will probably give a hypodermic to quiet the patient's alarm, and to stop his cough. Alcohol, whiskey and aromatic spirits of ammonia should not be given. They do harm.

Singular Plurals.

We'll begin with a box and the plural is boxes,
But the plural of ox should be oxen, not oxes;
Then one fowl is goose, but two are called geese,
Yet the plural of moose should never be meese.
You may find a lone mouse, or a whole lot of mice.
But the plural of house is houses, not hice.
If the plural of man is always called men,
Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?
The cow in plural may be cows or kine,
But a bow if repeated is never called bine,
And the plural of vow is vows, not vine.
And if I speak of a foot and you show me your feet,
And I give you a boot, would a pair be called beet?
If one is a tooth and a whole set are teeth,
Why shouldn't the plural of booth be called beeth?
If the singular is this and plural is these,
Should the plural of kiss be nicknamed keese?
So the English, I think, you all will agree,
Is the most wonderful language you ever did see.

WEST SUMNER

Fiftieth Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Farrar observed their 50th wedding anniversary on the evening of May 10, by entertaining 200 friends and relatives in the vestry of the Universalist church.

They were united in marriage May 10, 1866, by Hiram Coburn, Justice of the Peace. Six children have been born to them, and they have cause for great thankfulness, there never having been a break in their family nor in the family of Mr. Farrar's father.

FEDERAL APPLE BARREL

The new Federal law on the measurements of barrels will go into effect on July 1 next. It specifies that all barrels used in the sale of fruits and vegetables after that date must contain 7056 cubic inches, the equivalent of 105 quarts or approximately three bushels. The dimensions or shape of the barrels may differ, but they must hold the proper cubic amount. A $500 fine or six months' imprisonment is provided for violation of the law and it is to be strictly enforced in all the states.

The above new Federal law will not affect the Maine law, for it is said that our measurements, according to Chapter 156, Sec. 1, Laws of 1913—28 1-2 length of stave, 17 1-8 diameter of head, 26 inches between heads, and 64 inches outside circumference of the bulge—will measure fully to the United States requirements.

The Maine standard for a bushel box for apples measures 18x11 1-2x10 1-2 inches. The words "Standard Barrel" or "Standard Box" must also be attached to all such apple packages in Maine, violations of this provision being liable to a fine not exceeding $100.

ALBANY

Cold weather still hangs on. It looks now as if the "white Sunday" must come in June instead of May this year if it comes at all.

Arthur Bean of East Albany met with a loss last week. He had the best pair of oxen in town, worth about $300. One of them was taken ill and died.

Harry McNally has sold his white horse to Fred Littlefield. Mr. Littlefield has bought Millard Lord's farm and is going to put a big crew in the woods peeling timber. We understand he paid $2,000. Quite a difference in the price of farms today and 44 years ago. In 1872 Cale A. M. Edwards of Michigan bought the same farm and twice as much with it as there is today for $1,250. At that time it took in all of the big meadow now owned by C. H. Fernald and all the wild timberland west of the valley road up to George Briggs' land and up to Isaiah Haselton's land. The west side of the road was more valuable than the side of the road where the buildings are today. David A. Edwards of Bethel moved onto the farm and logged there two winters and then moved to Norway and A. M. Edwards sold the farm to Samuel Guptill and son, Orin Guptill. After they had logged a while they divided up the farm, and Orin Guptill took the west side of the road which contained the big meadow and larger part of the timber. Mr. Guptill's daughter married Millard Lord and he has carried on the farm ever since. He has been logging more or less ever since he has lived on the place. Cale A. M. Edwards sold the farm for $1,300. If all the timber could stand on that farm today that was there 40 years ago the place would be worth $3,000.
